contents

The National Academy of Sciences' Committee on the Forensic Sciences recently released a sweeping critique of evidence used by police and prosecutors to convict defendants which includes controversial recommendations that would substantially change the field. NACDL Leader Marvin Schechter participated on the NAS Task Force that produced a highly anticipated report entitled: "Identifying the Needs of the Forensic Sciences Community." In this 1-hour program, Mr. Schechter provides an update on the Task Force's findings and the content of that Report.
