

Indigent Defense Training Scholarship – Frequently Asked Questions

May I apply for more than one scholarship?

Yes, you may apply for more than one scholarship. However, due to limited funds it is unlikely that a scholarship would be granted for more than one program. Therefore, when submitting multiple applications, please specify your order of preference. Separate applications should be completed for each program.

I am a head of a defender office and I would like to send several of my attorneys to a training program. Should I apply for scholarships on their behalf or do they need to complete applications on their own?

Attorneys should complete their own scholarship applications. The evaluation of applications is highly individualized, and personal responses are required.

How can I find out if there are still scholarships available for a particular program?

NACDL does not set aside a specific number of scholarships or a specific dollar amount of assistance for any programs. However, we do adhere to previously determined spending guidelines within any particular time period. If you have questions about whether there may still be funding available for a particular program, please email Diane Price at DPrice@nacdl.org.

Are scholarships available for indigent defense support, such as investigators or social workers?

While NACDL recognizes and values the contribution that investigators and social workers make to indigent legal services organizations, we can only provide scholarship assistance to licensed attorneys.

What documentation do I need to supply to receive my scholarship reimbursement?

All scholarship recipients must return the pre- and post-training evaluations that are provided to them before the conference. To receive tuition/registration reimbursement, you will need to provide a copy of your registration receipt as well as proof of attendance (CLE certificate or other confirmation of attendance signed by conference staff). If you received travel assistance, you must submit your hotel and airfare/train receipts also.