INTRODUCTION

The administration appointed Sigal Chattah as the interim U.S. Attorney for the District of Nevada on or about March 28, 2025. Under 28 U.S.C. § 546(c)(2), she was authorized to serve for 120 days as interim U.S. Attorney. That period expired on or about July 26, 2025. The judges of this district now have authority to appoint a new interim U.S. Attorney until the Senate confirms a permanent nominee. 28 U.S.C. § 546(d).

On or about July 28, 2025, the administration pursued personnel maneuvers involving Ms. Chattah and purported to direct her to serve as acting U.S. Attorney under 5 U.S.C. § 3345 et seq. But no statute authorizes the administration to extend her temporary appointment. Section 3345 does not permit Ms. Chattah to serve as an acting officer under the circumstances at issue here. Even if it did, the controlling time limit comes from Section 546, which applies to individuals appointed as interim U.S. Attorneys, not Section 3345 et seq., which are general statutes. Were there any doubt, the statutes should be read to avoid serious constitutional concerns regarding the Appointments Clause. The Court should determine Ms. Chattah's conduct as acting U.S. Attorney is "void." United States v. Giraud, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2025 WL 2416737, at *27 (D.N.J. Aug. 21, 2025).

The Court should dismiss the indictment; at a minimum, it should disqualify Ms. Chattah from this prosecution, as well as attorneys operating under her direction; and the judges of this district should exercise their authority to appoint a proper interim U.S. Attorney under Section 546(d).

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

I. The administration appoints Sigal Chattah on an interim basis, then purports to direct her to serve on an acting basis.

Jason M. Frierson was the last Senate-confirmed U.S. Attorney for the District of Nevada.² Mr. Frierson resigned on January 17, 2025. Id. On or about January 21, Sue Fahami—who was serving as the first assistant, see 28 C.F.R. § 0.137(b)—began serving as the acting U.S. Attorney under 5 U.S.C. § 3345(a)(1).³

A few months later, the administration appointed Sigal Chattah as interim U.S. Attorney under 28 U.S.C. § 546. On information and belief, the appointment occurred on March 28, 2025.⁴ She was sworn in April 1.⁵

On information and belief, on or about July 28, 2025, the administration pursued a series of personnel maneuvers and ultimately purported to direct

Ms. Chattah to serve as acting U.S. Attorney for the district under Section 3345.⁶ The defense is unaware of the details of the specific steps that led to this result. Some reporting has indicated Ms. Chattah purported to submit her resignation as interim U.S. Attorney to the administration on or about July 28.⁷ The Department of Justice's website indicates Ms. Chattah was contemporaneously appointed as special attorney to the Attorney General.⁸ Some reporting suggests Ms. Chattah was named first assistant U.S. Attorney for the district,⁹ but the defense has not confirmed that reporting, and on information and belief Ms. Fahami has consistently served in the first assistant role during the relevant periods. The defense is likewise unaware of President Trump having nominated Ms. Chattah for the permanent position or having personally directed Ms. Chattah to serve as the acting U.S. Attorney.

1 II. The administration has pursued similar maneuvers in other
2 districts.

3 Ms. Chattah's purported installment as acting U.S. Attorney follows a 4 pattern covering at least four other districts.

5 A. The District of New Jersey.¹⁰

6 Philip R. Sellinger was the last Senate-confirmed U.S. Attorney for the 7 District of New Jersey. Mr. Sellinger resigned from the position effective January 8 8, 2025.

9 Following Mr. Sellinger's resignation, on or about January 8, 2025, Vikas
10 Khanna—who was then serving as the first assistant U.S. Attorney—began serving 11 as the acting U.S. Attorney.

12 On or about March 3, 2025, the administration appointed John Giordano as 13 interim U.S. Attorney under 28 U.S.C. § 546. On or about March 28, the 14 administration replaced Mr. Giordano and appointed Alina Habba as interim U.S.
15 Attorney. The administration nominated her for the permanent U.S. Attorney 16 position on June 30.

17 With Ms. Habba's term under Section 546 nearing its anticipated end, on 18 July 22, 2025, the judges of the district appointed Desiree Grace, who was then 19 serving as the first assistant U.S. Attorney, as the interim U.S. Attorney under 28
20 U.S.C. § 546(d). The appointment was effective on July 22, or on an undetermined 21 date when Ms. Habba's tenure ended under Section 546, whichever came later.

23 ¹⁰ See United States v. Giraud, No. 24-cr-768, 2025 WL 2416737, at *1–5 (D.N.J. Aug. 21, 2025); United States v. Giraud, No. 24-cr-768, 2025 WL 2196794, at
*1–3 (D.N.J. Aug. 1, 2025).

1 The administration fired Ms. Grace on July 22, 2025, and, on July 24, took 2 the following five actions:

- 3 • withdrew Ms. Habba's nomination for the permanent position;
- 4 • had Ms. Habba purport to resign as interim U.S. Attorney;

B. The Northern District of New York.

Carla B. Freedman was the last Senate-confirmed U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of New York.¹¹ Ms. Freedman resigned from the position on February 17, 2025.¹²

Following Ms. Freedman's resignation, on February 17, 2025, Daniel Hanlon—who was then serving as the first assistant U.S. Attorney—began serving as the acting U.S. Attorney.¹³

On March 4, 2025, the administration appointed John Sarcone III as interim U.S. Attorney under 28 U.S.C. § 546, and he began serving in that role on March 17.¹⁴ The President did not submit Mr. Sarcone as a nominee for Senate confirmation.

On July 14, 2025, shortly before Mr. Sarcone's term under Section 546 was set to expire, the district court announced it declined to appoint an interim U.S.

20 ²³ At present, the defense is filing equivalent motions in what the defense 21 understands to be the only three cases in this district for which the indictment was 22 dated and filed on or after July 26, 2025, and the Court appointed the Federal 23 Public Defender, District of Nevada, to represent the defendant: the instant case;
United States v. Salazar Del Real, No. 2:25-cr-227; and United States v. Garcia, No.
2:25-cr-230. The Federal Public Defender may pursue this issue in other cases but at this time takes no position on whether the issue implicates cases where the indictments predate July 26.

LEGAL BACKGROUND

This motion involves the interplay between two statutory regimes: 5 U.S.C. § 3345 et seq., which involves Executive Branch vacancies generally; and 28 U.S.C. § 546, which involves U.S. Attorney vacancies specifically.

I. 5 U.S.C. § 3345 et seq.

Title 5, Section 3345 et seq.—known colloquially as the Federal Vacancies Reform Act (“FVRA”)—deals with executive branch vacancies generally.

Section 3345(a) covers situations where an officer whose position requires appointment and confirmation “dies, resigns, or is otherwise unable to perform the functions and duties of the office.” Under subsection (c)(2), “the expiration of a term of office is an inability to perform the functions and duties of such office.” The statute provides three options to fill the position on an acting basis.

The first (and default) rule: an already-in-place first assistant can become the acting officer. Under subsection (a)(1), the first assistant in the office “shall perform the functions and duties of the office temporarily in an acting capacity.” This provision “fills the role automatically.” Hooks v. Kitsap Tenant Support Services, Inc., 816 F.3d 550, 557 (9th Cir. 2016); see also NLRB v. SW General, Inc., 580 U.S. 288, 295 (2017) (describing this as “a general rule”). As explained below, for this provision to apply, the relevant individual must have been serving as first assistant when the vacancy occurred.

The other two options are exceptions to that default rule; there are “two ways the President may override the automatic operation of” Section 3345(a)(1), Hooks, 816 F.3d at 557, and instead select someone other than the then-first assistant.

1 First, under Section 3345(a)(2), “the President (and only the President)” can select 2 another individual as the acting officer, if that other individual is already
3 “serv[ing]” in another position that requires Presidential “appointment” and Senate
4 confirmation. Second, under Section 3345(a)(3), “the President (and only the 5 President)” can select another senior government leader as the acting officer if the 6 individual satisfies three conditions. The individual must be currently serving as 7 an Executive Branch employee in the same “agency.” The individual must have 8 served in a position in that agency for at least “90 days” within “the 365-day period
9 preceding” the qualifying vacancy. And that position must have had a rate of pay 10 “equal to or greater than” the rate provided in the “GS-15” scale.

11 Whichever way the administration selects the acting officer, the statutory 12 scheme also includes time limits. Under Section 3346(a)(1), an acting officer may 13 serve “for no longer than 210 days beginning on the date the vacancy occurs.”
14 Under Section 3349a(b), if the vacancy exists when a new incoming President is 15 inaugurated, the period is extended: the individual may serve until 300 days after 16 inauguration day.

17 The FVRA also provides a remedy for improperly appointed individuals:
18 nullification. Section 3348(d)(1) provides that “[a]n action taken by any person who 19 is not” properly serving as an acting officer “in the performance of any function or 20 duty of a vacant office . . . shall have no force or effect.” Under Section 3348(d)(2), 21 such actions “may not be ratified” later. This “Ratification Bar . . . applies only to 22 those duties of an officer that are nondelegable.” Gonzales & Gonzales Bonds & Ins.
23 Agency, Inc. v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 107 F.4th 1064, 1073 (9th Cir. 2024).

1 II. 28 U.S.C. § 546.

2 Unlike the FVRA, 28 U.S.C. § 546 deals with U.S. Attorney vacancies
3 specifically.

4 Title 28, Section 541 establishes the position of United States Attorney.
5 Subsection (a) sets the default rule that permanent U.S. Attorneys must receive 6 Presidential appointment and Senate confirmation (a type of position occasionally
7 referred to as a “PAS” position).²⁴

8 Section 546 covers U.S. Attorney vacancies. The statute allows the Attorney
9 General to make an interim appointment: under subsection (a), “the Attorney 10 General may appoint a United States attorney for the district in which the office of 11 United States attorney is vacant.” Individuals serving as interim U.S. Attorneys 12 are “fully-empowered United States Attorneys” as opposed to “subordinates
13 assuming the role of ‘Acting’ United States Attorney.” United States v. Gantt, 194
14 F.3d 987, 999 n.5 (9th Cir. 1999), overruled on other grounds by United States v.
15 W.R. Grace, 526 F.3d 499, 506 (9th Cir. 2008) (en banc).

16 This Attorney-General-directed appointment authority is time-limited.
17 Under Section 546(c)(2), an interim U.S. Attorney may serve for “120 days after 18 appointment by the Attorney General.” This 120-day limit was added to the statute 19

21 ²⁴ Other sections deal with other positions, some of which do not require 22 Senate confirmation. Under Section 542, for instance, the Attorney General may 23 appoint assistant United States attorneys—the line prosecutors of the federal system. Under Section 515(a), a Department of Justice attorney (including a specially appointed attorney) “may, when specifically directed by the Attorney General, conduct any kind of legal proceeding, civil or criminal, including grand jury proceedings . . . which United States attorneys are authorized by law to conduct.”

1 in 2007. See Preserving United States Attorney Independence Act of 2007, Pub. L.
2 No. 110-34. And, as detailed below, the 120-day limit was specifically designed to 3 address concerns that presidential administrations might improperly use interim
4 U.S. Attorney appointments to avoid the Senate’s constitutional advice-and-consent 5 function.

6 After an Attorney-General-directed appointee hits the 120-day mark, filling
7 the vacancy falls to the judiciary. Under Section 546(d), if the 120-day 8 “appointment” period “expires,” “the district court for such district may appoint a 9 United States attorney to serve until the vacancy is filled.”

10 ARGUMENT

11 Ms. Chattah is improperly serving as a non-confirmed U.S. Attorney at least 12 thrice over.

13 First, and most obviously, Ms. Chattah satisfies none of the criteria to be an 14 acting officer under the FVRA. Prior to Mr. Frierson’s resignation, she was not (1) 15 an already-in-place first assistant; (2) a Senate-confirmed officer in another role; or 16 (3) an already-in-place senior official in the U.S. Attorney’s Office. Because 17 Ms. Chattah is not a proper FVRA “acting” officer, her post-July 26 actions have no 18 force or effect.

19 Second, and alternatively, Ms. Chattah cannot continue serving as acting 20 U.S. Attorney under the FVRA after she exhausted her 120-day interim 21 appointment under Section 546(c). That more-specific 120-day time limit controls
22 over the FVRA’s general-purpose provisions here—a reality confirmed by at least 23 three statutory interpretation principles (specific-over-general, the presumption-

1 against-surplusage canon, and the “mischief” rule). In brief: once the 2 administration appoints someone under Section 546, a non-confirmed “interim” U.S.
3 Attorney can serve in the role only 120 days, even if the administration
4 redesignates the same individual as an acting (as opposed to an interim) U.S.
5 Attorney. Since Ms. Chattah has purported to serve past the 120-day time limit, 6 her post-July 26 actions are unlawful.

7 And, third, even if Ms. Chattah’s purported appointment somehow
8 technically complied with the statutes, the particular maneuver here would pose 9 grave Appointments Clause problems. U.S. Attorneys exercise sufficient power to 10 be principal officers for constitutional purposes. And despite Ms. Chattah’s acting 11 label, the administration is attempting to capture essentially all that power by 12 extending her term—potentially indefinitely. If the administration’s statutory 13 reading is right, then its theory would require Ms. Chattah to be confirmed by the 14 Senate.

15 Under whatever framing, Ms. Chattah cannot legally exercise the duties of 16 the acting U.S. Attorney for the District of Nevada. The Court should dismiss the 17 indictment against Mr. Jackson because it was dated and filed during Ms. Chattah’s 18 time as an improperly designated acting U.S. Attorney. Alternatively, and at a 19 minimum, the Court should disqualify Ms. Chattah and all those under her 20 supervision at the United States Attorney’s Office for the District of Nevada from 21 further proceedings in this matter.

I. Ms. Chattah is not properly serving as U.S. Attorney.

A. Ms. Chattah is not a qualified acting officer under 5 U.S.C. § 3345.

Ms. Chattah cannot serve as an acting officer under Section 3345.

Mr. Frierson's resignation on January 17, 2025, is a qualifying vacancy under the statute, but Ms. Chattah does not meet the statutory requirements necessary to fill that vacancy. The government may invoke the vacancy that occurred on or about July 26, when Ms. Chattah's term under Section 546 expired, or on or about July 28, when she purported to resign as interim U.S. Attorney, but neither was a qualifying vacancy.

1. Ms. Chattah is ineligible to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Frierson's resignation.

A vacancy occurred under 5 U.S.C. § 3345(a) when Mr. Frierson resigned as the Senate-confirmed U.S. Attorney on January 17, 2025. But Ms. Chattah is not eligible to serve as an acting officer to fill that vacancy. The administration has three options to direct someone to serve as an acting officer under Section 3345(a), but none of those options applies to Ms. Chattah.

a. Ms. Chattah was not an already-in-place first assistant.

Under Section 3345(a)(1)—the default rule—the first assistant to the officer becomes the acting officer. But Ms. Chattah was not the first assistant U.S. Attorney for the district on January 17, 2025, and, on information and belief, has never served as first assistant. Rather, on information and belief, Ms. Fahami has consistently served as first assistant from before January 17 to present.²⁵ Indeed, Ms. Fahami served as acting U.S. Attorney from on or about January 21 to April 1 under Section 3345(a)(1) based on her role as first assistant. Ms. Chattah is therefore ineligible to serve as an acting officer under that provision.

Assuming the administration named Ms. Chattah first assistant on or about July 28, 2025 (or does so now), that would not solve the problem. Rather, for Section 3345(a)(1) to operate, the relevant individual must have been serving as first assistant when the vacancy occurred. See SW General, Inc. v. NLRB, 796 F.3d 67, 78 (D.C. Cir. 2015) (“Although we do not decide its meaning today, subsection (a)(1) may refer to the person who is serving as first assistant when the vacancy occurs.”); L.M.-M. v. Cuccinelli, 442 F. Supp. 3d 1, 28 (D.D.C. 2020) (expressing “doubt on whether Congress intended the phrase ‘first assistant’ to encompass those appointed to the first-assistant position after the vacancy arose”).²⁶ That much is “convincingly” confirmed by the “statutory framework” for at least two reasons. Giraud, 2025 WL 2416737, at *14.

First, Section 3345(a)(1) “function[s] in a simple if-then form”: “the promotion of the first assistant occurs automatically at the moment of the vacancy.” Giraud, ²⁵ As explained above, some reporting indicates Ms. Chattah has been named first assistant, but the defense has not confirmed that reporting.

²⁶ See also Stephen Migala, The Vacancies Act and a Post-Vacancy First Assistant of USCIS, at 20 (Sept. 9, 2019), <https://ssrn.com/abstract=3450843> (“Critically, the precise question of whether the first assistant to a PAS office can be installed post-vacancy was answered in the negative.”); Federal Vacancies Reform Act, S. Rep. No. 105-250, at 14–15 (1998) (“This provision allows the office to be temporarily filled by ‘the person’ who was originally eligible to be the acting officer at the time the vacancy arose.”).

1 2025 WL 2416737, at *14. As a result, “[t]here is no textual indication that the 2 President has any choice in invoking the first assistant provision.” Id. And that 3 likewise means the provision is “no[t] . . . meant to trigger at any time other than 4 the moment that the vacancy occurs.” Id.

5 And, second, allowing an administration to name its own first assistant post-6 vacancy and then turn that person into the acting officer “would render the limits in 7 subsections (a)(2) and (a)(3) surplusage in the vast majority of cases.” Giraud, 2025
8 WL 2416737, at *15. “Those provisions set a very high bar for the President’s 9 options for a non-first-assistant acting official.” Id. “But if the President may 10 simply name anyone as the first assistant at any time and thereby vest them with 11 acting powers, these limitations on acting service are rendered entirely irrelevant.”
12 Id. The statute is better read to avoid these issues: only an already-in-place first 13 assistant—not a post-vacancy one—can assume the acting title. See id.

14 In brief: the first assistant when the January 17 vacancy occurred was 15 Ms. Fahami, not Ms. Chattah. Ms. Chattah thus cannot serve as acting U.S.
16 Attorney under this provision.

17 b. Ms. Chattah was not Senate-confirmed for 18 another office.

19 Under Section 3345(a)(2), the President can alternatively direct another 20 individual to serve as an acting officer if the other individual has already been 21 nominated and confirmed for another executive office and is presently serving in 22 that office. But, on information and belief, Ms. Chattah has never been nominated 23

1 and confirmed for another executive office. Ms. Chattah is therefore ineligible to 2 serve as acting U.S. Attorney under this provision.

3 c. Ms. Chattah was not an already-in-place
4 senior officer in the relevant office.

5 Under Section 3345(a)(3), the President can alternatively direct another
6 individual to serve as an acting officer if the individual worked in the relevant
7 agency (and received a salary equal to or above the GS-15 scale) for at least 90 days
8 during the previous 365 days preceding the vacancy. But, on information and 9 belief, Ms. Chattah was not working in the U.S. Attorney's Office (or the 10 Department of Justice) at all between January 2024 and January 2025. To the 11 contrary, on information and belief, she was in private practice.²⁷ Ms. Chattah is 12 therefore ineligible to serve as acting U.S. Attorney under Section 3345(a)(3).

13 Because Ms. Chattah is not an eligible acting officer under any of the three 14 statutory options, her designation as acting U.S. Attorney is invalid.

15 2. The July vacancy is not a qualifying vacancy.

16 Ms. Chattah's term as interim U.S. Attorney ended on July 26, 2025. In the 17 alternative, assuming her term was set to end on July 30, she purported to resign as 18 interim U.S. Attorney on or about July 28. Either way, the July 26 or July 28
19 vacancy does not render her eligible to serve as acting U.S. Attorney for three 20 independent reasons: (1) only departures of Senate-confirmed officers count; (2)
21 assuming her term was still active on July 28, there was no bona fide resignation;

22
23 ²⁷ See Sigal Chattah Appointed Interim United States Attorney for the District of Nevada, U.S. Dep't of Justice (Apr. 1, 2025), <https://www.justice.gov/usao-nv/pr/sigal-chattah-appointed-interim-united-states-attorney-district-nevada>.

1 and (3) any resignation (or expiration of her term) means that Ms. Chattah was not
 2 an employee of the relevant executive agency (the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the 3 District of Nevada) at the time of her purported acting designation.

4 First, the resignation (or the expiration of the term) of an acting, interim, or 5 other temporary officer is insufficient to create a vacancy within the meaning of 6 Section 3345(a). Rather, a qualifying vacancy occurs only if a Senate-confirmed
 7 individual leaves office. “[T]he person whose ‘vacancy’ brings the [statute] into 8 operation must have ascended to the post through a Presidential appointment,” as 9 opposed to a temporary assignment. Doolin Sec. Sav. Bank, F.S.B. v. Office of 10 Thrift Supervision, 139 F.3d 203, 208 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (interpreting the pre-1998

 12 v. FDA, 981 F.3d 26, 28 (D.C. Cir. 2020).²⁸ “There may be instances when a person, 13 not constitutionally appointed, temporarily performs the duties of” an office that 14 generally requires appointment and confirmation. Id. But the temporary officer’s 15 “performance of those duties does not make him . . . an ‘officer’ . . . for the purposes
 16 of the Act.” Id. “Otherwise,” the time limitations on acting service “could be easily 17 avoided by a series of temporary replacements followed by resignations, with each in a manner that overrides some of those additional holdings. See, e.g., Gonzalez, 107 F.4th at 1093–94 (Christen, J., dissenting) (discussing one such holding). But nothing in the statutory amendments altered Doolin’s conclusion that a vacancy under Section 3345 occurs only when a Senate-confirmed individual leaves office.

1 resignation triggering a new” acting officer designation. Id. “In short,” the acting 2 officer statutes “apply only to those vacancies caused by the departure of an officer
3 of the Executive Branch who had been appointed by the President.” Id.

4 Accordingly, the departure of a temporary official—like an interim U.S.
5 Attorney—does not qualify as a departure under the statute because the Senate has 6 not confirmed the individual for the position. Because Ms. Chattah was serving as 7 a non-Senate-confirmed interim U.S. Attorney at the time of her resignation (or the 8 expiration of her term), her departure failed to create a new vacancy under Section 9 3345.

10 Second, assuming Ms. Chattah’s term remained active on July 28, 2025, and 11 assuming an interim U.S. Attorney’s bona fide resignation could in the abstract
12 qualify as a new vacancy under Section 3345, another problem arises. Ms. Chattah
13 may have technically resigned from her position on July 28. But that resignation
14 was not a bona fide resignation. It therefore failed to create a qualifying vacancy 15 under the statute.

16 The verb “resign” means “[t]o formally announce one’s decision to leave a job
17 or an organization.” Black’s Law Dictionary (12th ed. 2024). To genuinely resign 18 from an office, the individual must possess a subjective desire “to surrender” the 19 duties of the office, at least for the foreseeable future. Id. If an individual purports
20 to resign from an office but expects to automatically reassume exactly the same 21 duties through procedural machinations leading to an equivalent role and/or title, 22 the individual is not truly “resigning” in any meaningful sense of the word.
23

1 Those concerns are present here. Ms. Chattah apparently resigned her
2 position as interim U.S. Attorney on or about July 28, 2025; immediately or shortly
3 thereafter, she was apparently directed to serve as the acting U.S. Attorney. An 4 interim U.S. Attorney and an acting U.S. Attorney have substantially the same 5 duties—both roles fill the U.S. Attorney position temporarily pending (in the typical 6 case) Senate confirmation of a permanent nominee. Assuming Ms. Chattah
7 resigned as interim U.S. Attorney solely to allow herself to be named acting U.S.
8 Attorney, her technical resignation as interim U.S. Attorney cannot be deemed a 9 true resignation under the statute.²⁹

10 A contrary understanding of the term “resignation” would be untenable.
11 “[W]ell-accepted rules of statutory construction caution us that statutory 12 interpretations which would produce absurd results are to be avoided.” Arizona
13 State Bd. For Charter Sch. v. U.S. Dep’t of Educ., 464 F.3d 1003, 1008 (9th Cir.
14 2006) (cleaned up). Likewise, courts should not interpret a statute to frustrate clear
15 legislative intent. See, e.g., Pub. Citizen v. Dep’t of Justice, 491 U.S. 440, 455–65
16 (1989). If the resignation of a temporary officer were understood to create a new 17 vacancy under Section 3345(a), and if a mere technical resignation counted as a 18 true resignation under the statute, then the administration could allow the 19 temporary officer to serve as the acting officer indefinitely, merely by having the 20

22 ²⁹ Illustrating the point, when Ms. Habba “resigned” her interim U.S.
23 Attorney position in New Jersey, her resignation letter read as follows: “I hereby resign my position as Interim United States Attorney . . . I look forward to continuing to lead the U.S. Attorney’s Office.” United States v. Giraud, No. 24-cr-768, ECF No. 108-4 (D.N.J. filed July 29, 2025).

1 individual repeatedly resign and get re-designated. With that understanding, the 2 relevant time limitations on acting service—and the need for a permanent nominee
3 to receive Senate confirmation—“could be easily avoided.” Doolin, 139 F.3d at 208.

4 Section 3345 cannot be understood in this fashion. Rather, to create a 5 qualifying vacancy under the statute, a “resignation” must be bona fide.
6 Ms. Chattah’s technical resignation as interim U.S. Attorney was not bona fide. To 7 the contrary, the administration immediately redesignated her into a materially 8 equivalent position as acting U.S. Attorney. The resignation therefore failed to 9 create a new vacancy.

10 Third, even if the July vacancy created a qualifying vacancy, Ms. Chattah 11 remains ineligible. Section 3345(a)(1) cannot apply because, even assuming the 12 administration designated her first assistant in July (or does so in the future), the 13 provision applies to the individual in the first assistant role at the moment the 14 vacancy occurs, and on information and belief Ms. Chattah was not simultaneously
15 serving as first assistant and interim U.S. Attorney at the moment the July vacancy
16 occurred. Section 3345(a)(2) cannot apply because on information and belief
17 Ms. Chattah has not been nominated and confirmed to another Executive Branch 18 position. Section 3345(a)(3) cannot apply either. That provision allows the 19 President to “direct an officer or employee of such Executive agency to perform the 20 functions and duties of the vacant office.” In other words, the President can select 21 someone who is currently working in the office—at the moment the vacancy
22 occurs—to serve as the acting officer. On information and belief, once Ms. Chattah’s 23 term expired on July 26, 2025, or in the alternative once she resigned on July 28,

1 she was no longer working for the U.S. Attorney’s Office at the moment the vacancy
2 occurred, because the vacancy itself—the term expiration or her resignation—
3 ceased her employment with the office. At that point, the President could have 4 selected as acting officer a sufficiently senior employee who, at that moment, was 5 working for the U.S. Attorney’s Office. But because Ms. Chattah was no longer with 6 the office at that moment, she was ineligible.

7 Were there any doubt on these questions of statutory interpretation, the 8 Court should apply the canon of constitutional avoidance and resolve them in the 9 defense’s favor. See, e.g., Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 296 (2018)
10 (discussing the canon); United States v. Hansen, 599 U.S. 762, 781 (2023) (“When 11 legislation and the Constitution brush up against each other, our task is to seek 12 harmony, not to manufacture conflict.”). As explained below, a contrary reading of 13 the statutes would pose serious concerns under both the Appointments Clause and 14 separation of powers principles by allowing the Executive Branch to circumvent the 15 constitutional requirements of receiving advice and consent from a co-equal branch
16 of government.³⁰ The Court should refuse to read the statute in this 17 unconstitutional manner.

18 The constitutional concerns are heightened because the administration’s 19 maneuvers are novel—particularly the designation of Ms. Chattah as a “special 20

22 ³⁰ See, e.g., Freytag v. C.I.R., 501 U.S. 868, 878, 880, 887 (1991) (noting these 23 types of challenges go to “the Constitution’s structural integrity” and “the entire Republic” because they reflect one branch attempting to “aggrandiz[e] its power at the expense of another branch” and thereby “diffus[e] the appointment power”);

1 attorney.” Although “Attorneys General [have] made extensive use of special
 2 attorneys,” In re Persico, 522 F.2d 41, 54 (2d Cir. 1975), the administration’s efforts
 3 in this and related cases appear to be the first times that an Attorney General has 4 used the special-attorney appointment provision in 28 U.S.C. § 515 or its 5 predecessors to purportedly install an acting U.S. Attorney.³¹ Cf. Seila Law LLC v.
 6 Consumer Fin. Prot. Bureau, 591 U.S. 197, 220 (2020) (“Perhaps the most telling 7 indication of a severe constitutional problem with an executive entity is a lack of 8 historical precedent to support it.”) (cleaned up). In brief: the administration is 9 attempting an unusual maneuver that contravenes the text of the statute and poses
 10 grave constitutional concerns. Such efforts should be rejected.

11 3. There is no indication the President made the 12 designation directly.

13 If the President seeks to designate someone other than the first assistant as 14 an acting officer under Sections 3345(a)(2) or 3345(a)(3), the statutes provide that 15 “the President (and only the President)” must give the direction. Assuming the 16 administration purported to direct Ms. Chattah to serve as acting U.S. Attorney 17 under Sections 3345(a)(2) or 3345(a)(3), the defense has insufficient information to 18 determine whether President Trump specifically (as opposed to another Executive 19
 20
 21

22 ³¹ The first instance of designating a special attorney as an acting U.S.
 23 Attorney appears to be Ms. Habba’s purported acting designation in the District of New Jersey—done less than a week before Ms. Chattah’s purported acting designation here.

Branch officer) gave the direction.³² Unless the government can provide evidence demonstrating President Trump specifically gave the direction, Ms. Chattah’s tenure is invalid for this independent reason.

Ms. Chattah satisfies none of the three paths to serve as an acting U.S. Attorney under Section 3345(a). Ms. Chattah is not legally an acting officer under that statute.

B. Even if Ms. Chattah were qualified under 5 U.S.C. § 3345, the controlling time limit is from 28 U.S.C. § 546.

If Ms. Chattah somehow satisfied the FVRA’s requirements, she is invalidly exercising the powers of U.S. Attorney because she has exceeded 28 U.S.C. § 546’s time limits. Under that U.S.-Attorney-specific statute, Ms. Chattah could serve as a non-confirmed U.S. Attorney for only 120 days. The administration cannot get her additional days—and thereby disregard both the judicial appointment power in Section 546(d) and the Senate’s constitutional advice-and-consent function—by invoking the FVRA’s more general timelines.

At least three rules of statutory interpretation confirm as much:

- (1) the specific-over-general canon;
- (2) the presumption against surplusage; and
- (3) the “mischief” rule.

³² Cf. Statement Regarding United States Attorney Ryan Ellison’s Acting Appointment, U.S. Dep’t of Justice (Aug. 15, 2025), <https://www.justice.gov/usao-nm/pr/statement-regarding-united-states-attorney-ryan-ellisons-acting-appointment> (explaining Mr. Ellison is purporting to serve as acting U.S. Attorney “at the request of the Attorney General”).

1 This section addresses each in turn.

2 1. A non-confirmed U.S. Attorney appointed under 3 Section 546 cannot serve more than 120 days.

4 The defense assumes for the sake of argument that in the abstract, the 5 administration can either designate an acting U.S. Attorney under Section 3345 or 6 an interim U.S. Attorney under Section 546.³³ But if the administration pursues
 7 the latter route, the individual appointed as interim U.S. Attorney may serve for 8 only 120 days in either an interim or an acting capacity. Because Ms. Chattah has 9 exceeded the 120-day limit (which ended on July 26, 2025, assuming her 10 appointment occurred on March 28), her continued post-July 26 service as acting 11 U.S. Attorney is improper.

12 Under Section 546(c) and (c)(2), “A person appointed as United States 13 attorney under this section may serve until . . . the expiration of 120 days after 14 appointment” (emphasis added). Ms. Chattah was appointed as interim U.S.
 15 Attorney under Section 546. Thus, she “may serve” in a temporary capacity for 16 only “120 days.” 28 U.S.C. § 546(c) & (c)(2). That rule applies regardless of 17 whether her service proceeds under Section 546 or Section 3345—either way, she is

18
 19 ³³ In Hooks, the Ninth Circuit concluded the administration could direct 20 someone to serve as the Acting General Counsel of the National Labor Relations
 21 Board under Section 3345, even though a more specific statute (29 U.S.C. § 153(d))
 22 covered the temporary designation of an Acting General Counsel. 816 F.3d at 556 23 (“[T]he President is permitted to elect between these two statutory alternatives to designate an Acting General Counsel.”). Hooks may appear to foreclose an argument that the administration cannot elect between Section 3345 and Section 546. The defense nevertheless preserves for further review a challenge to Hooks along the same lines as the argument presented here: because Section 546 is the more specific statute, the administration may proceed only through Section 546 and not through the more general framework from Section 3345.

1 “serv[ing]” in a materially equivalent role as a temporary, non-confirmed U.S.
2 Attorney. Id. She may no longer continue to “serve” under either statute following 3 the end of the 120-day period. Id.

4 This conclusion respects the canon of statutory interpretation regarding 5 specific and general statutes. When assessing the interplay between two statutes, 6 “the specific governs the general.” RadLAX Gateway Hotel, LLC v. Amalgamated 7 Bank, 566 U.S. 639, 645 (2012) (cleaned up); see also id. (describing this rule as 8 “well established” and “commonplace”); Morton v. Mancari, 417 U.S. 535, 550
9 (1974) (“a specific provision applying to a very specific situation” controls over a law
10 “of general application”); United States v. Bormes, 568 U.S. 6, 12–13 (2012)
11 (identifying that this rule also applies across statutes enacted at different times).
12 This canon is often employed where “a general permission or prohibition is 13 contradicted by a specific prohibition or permission.” RadLAX, 566 U.S. at 645.
14 “But the canon has full application as well to statutes . . . in which a general 15 authorization and a more limited, specific authorization exist side-by-side.” Id. In 16 either setting, “[t]he terms of the specific authorization must be complied with.”
17 Id.

18 The statutes here present such a general-specific issue. The FVRA provides 19 a “general authorization,” RadLAX, 566 U.S. at 645, for all manner of Executive 20 Branch “acting” officials to serve for specified time limits, see 5 U.S.C. § 3345(a) 21 (applying generally to “an officer of an Executive agency”). Then Section 546 gives 22 a “more limited, specific authorization,” RadLAX, 566 U.S. at 645—120 days—for a 23 particular type of Executive Branch official: an individual appointed to serve as an

1 interim U.S. Attorney. See 28 U.S.C. § 546(a) (applying to “the office of United
2 States attorney”). Since these timelines conflict, “the specific presumptively
3 governs.” RadLAX, 566 U.S. at 648. And that means Section 546(c)’s 120-day limit
4 “must be complied with,” id. at 645—at least with respect to temporary U.S.
5 Attorneys who have been initially selected under Section 546.

6 That conclusion is further strengthened by the fact that Section 546(c)’s time
7 limit is newer than the FVRA. “When two statutes conflict the general rule is that 8 the statute last in time prevails as the most recent expression of the legislature’s
9 will.” Boudette v. Barnette, 923 F.2d 754, 757 (9th Cir. 1991).³⁴ The FVRA’s time
10 limits stem from 1998. See Pub. L. No. 105-277, § 151(b) (1998). Section 546(c)’s 11 120-day limit hails from 2007, having been re-added to the statute as part of the 12 Preserving United States Attorney Independence Act, Pub. L. No. 110-34 (2007).
13 As explained below, Congress enacted the 2007 statute precisely to avoid indefinite 14 interim appointments. Because the Section 546(c) appointment period is 15 “both later in time and more specific,” it controls over the general FVRA time
16 limits. Murphy Co. v. Biden, 65 F.4th 1122, 1140 (9th Cir. 2023) (Tallman, J., 17 concurring in part and dissenting in part).

18
20
21 ³⁴ See also e.g., United States v. Estate of Romani, 523 U.S. 517, 530–31
22 (1998) (“[A] specific policy embodied in a later federal statute should control our 23 construction of [an earlier] statute, even though [the earlier statute] had not been expressly amended.”); United States v. Hernandez-Garcia, 44 F.4th 1157, 1165 (9th Cir. 2022) (“If the newer statute comes closer to addressing the very problem posed by the case at hand, it is as if the later-enacted statute effectively repealed the conflicting provisions of the earlier one.”) (cleaned up).

1 Simply put: Congress knew there were more-generally-applicable FVRA time
 2 limits out there. That it chose to specifically add a 120-day limit in Section 546(c)
 3 against that backdrop confirms that Section 546(c)'s time limit controls here.
 4 Ms. Chattah has already served over 120 days in a temporary capacity and cannot 5 continue to serve as either acting or interim U.S. Attorney.

6 2. A contrary reading would render Section 546(d)
 7 superfluous.

8 The administration's attempt to extend Ms. Chattah's appointment beyond
 9 the 120 days authorized by Section 546(c) would improperly render Section 546(d)'s
 10 judicial appointment power superfluous. Under the administration's view, Section 11 546(d) is not triggered so long as the administration re-names the same person the 12 "acting" U.S. Attorney under Section 3345. If that is true, judicial appointment 13 would rarely (potentially never) happen. And so Section 546(d)'s judicial 14 appointment power "would lie dormant in all but the most unlikely situations."
 15 TRW Inc. v. Andrews, 534 U.S. 19, 31 (2001). That surplusage problem renders the 16 administration's reading improper under ordinary statutory interpretation
 17 principles. And it is a particular problem given the constitutional backdrop to 18 Congressional involvement here—as well as the 150-plus-year history of district
 19 courts' involvement in U.S. Attorney vacancy appointments. The Court should 20 avoid such a surplusage problem by strictly enforcing Section 546(c)'s 120-day 21 limit.

22 Courts read statutes to give effect to each of their provisions. Corley v.
 23 United States, 556 U.S. 303, 314 (2009) (identifying as "one of the most basic

1 interpretive canons[] that a statute should be construed so that effect is given to all
2 its provisions”) (cleaned up). It is thus “a cardinal principle of statutory 3 construction that a statute ought . . . to be so construed that . . . no clause, 4 sentence, or word shall be superfluous, void, or insignificant.” TRW Inc., 534 U.S.
5 at 31 (cleaned up). And that rule is applied “with special force” where (as here) a 6 potential interpretation “renders an entire subparagraph meaningless.” Pulsifer v.
7 United States, 601 U.S. 124, 143 (2024) (cleaned up). And it is even stronger still 8 “when the subparagraph is so evidently designed to serve a concrete function.” Id.
9 In such settings, superfluity concerns are particularly acute. See id.

10 Those constraints cut against the administration’s apparent reading here.
11 The administration seems to believe it can simply re-name an expired (or almost-12 expired) Section 546(a) appointee as an “acting” official under Section 3345. If that 13 is right, then Section 546(d)’s judicial-appointment function would apply only in 14 “the most unlikely situations.” TRW Inc., 534 U.S. at 31. Indeed, under such a 15 view, an administration could more than double the length of its non-confirmed
16 U.S. Attorney appointments, turning Section 546(c)’s 120-day limit into 330 days—
17 or maybe an indefinite period, by repeatedly stacking or swapping an individual’s 18 acting or interim status. And it could do so without ever having another branch of 19 government—neither Congress nor the judiciary—evaluate the appointee. It is not 20 evident from the administration’s apparent reading that its efforts would ever 21 trigger either Senate confirmation or Section 546(d) judicial appointment. That is 22 a surplusage problem. See TRW Inc., 534 U.S. at 31.

1 If that were not enough, the administration’s superfluity reading would 2 contravene over a century and a half of judicial appointment power in this space.
 3 The judicial power to fill U.S. Attorney vacancies until a Senate-confirmed
 4 successor predates the Attorney General’s temporary appointment power by nearly 5 125 years.³⁵ In fact, before 1986, federal district courts had exclusive authority to 6 fill such vacancies. See H.R. Rep. No. 110-58, at 4 (2007). And that judicial power
 7 even existed for 20 years in modern form in Section 546—from 1966 to 1986—
 8 before the Attorney General received the 120-day, time-limited appointment power.
 9 See id. Judicial appointment is, in short, “the rule.” Cuomo v. Clearing House 10 Ass’n, LLC, 557 U.S. 519, 530 (2009). The Court should not allow the more recent 11 “exception” of Executive Branch involvement to “swallow” that longstanding 12 practice. Id.

13 Unsurprisingly, prior presidential administrations have avoided that result 14 and have given effect to the Section 546(d) judicial appointment power. Until now, 15 a near-expired Section 546(a) appointee would typically be submitted to the 16 appropriate federal district court for potential re-appointment under Section 17
 18
 19

20 ³⁵ Exclusive judicial power to fill U.S. Attorney vacancies dates to at least 21 1863. Act of Mar. 3, 1863, ch. 93, § 2, 12 Stat. 768 (1863) (“In case of a vacancy in 22 the office of . . . district attorney in any circuit, the judge of such circuit may fill 23 such vacancy, and the person so appointed shall serve until an appointment shall be made by the President, and the appointee has duly qualified.”); see generally Bruce
 A. Green & Rebecca Roiphe, Depoliticizing Federal Prosecution, 100 Denv. L. Rev.
 817, 836–37 (2023) (identifying that the judicial interim appointment power dates at least to that 1863 statute).

1 546(d).³⁶ Rather than follow that routine practice, however, this administration is 2 now embracing an interpretation of the statutes that would make Section 546(d)
3 irrelevant “in all but the most unlikely situations.” TRW Inc., 534 U.S. at 31. That 4 calls its novel strategy into doubt. See id.; cf. Seila Law, 591 U.S. at 220
5 (identifying “a lack of a historical precedent” as “[p]erhaps the most telling 6 indication of a severe constitutional problem”) (cleaned up).

7 The defense’s reading, by contrast, suffers from neither a surplusage
8 problem nor a novelty one. See Corley, 556 U.S. at 314. Under the defense’s view, 9 the FVRA time limits still have meaningful effect—they apply to all sorts of acting 10 officials, including an acting U.S. Attorney, other than an individual who has 11 already been selected as an interim U.S. Attorney under Section 546. See id.; cf.
12 Gorecki v. Comm’r, Social Security Admin., 143 F.4th 1295, 1298–1301 (11th Cir.
13 2025) (discussing FVRA time limits for an acting commissioner of the Social 14 Security Administration).

15 Only under the defense’s reading do the two statutes work together
16 harmoniously as intended. Congress sensibly gave the Executive Branch a choice 17 between two distinct options in a manner that protects Congress’ interest in the 18 advice-and-consent process. Without burdening the President, the Attorney General can select virtually anyone to serve under Section 546(a), providing flexibility and speed in filling a vacancy. But that selection lasts only four months and cannot be extended without court approval, incentivizing a quick nomination. Alternatively, the President can intervene and make an FVRA selection—and secure its longer timeline—but the selection must come from a closed universe of senior officials, including those who have already been subjected to advice and consent, and excluding those who were previously selected under Section 546.

3. The Court should enforce Section 546’s 120-day limit to prevent the “mischief” underlying its enactment.

Section 546(c)’s 120-day time limit should be strictly enforced given the “mischief” that brought it about. Congress enacted Section 546(c) because it perceived that the Executive Branch was subverting the traditional Senate confirmation process with indefinite “interim” U.S. Attorney appointments. And that is essentially what the administration would authorize itself to do here with its interim-followed-by-acting maneuver. Section 546(c) is properly interpreted to avoid that result.

A statute’s meaning is informed by the “mischief” that prompted its enactment. See, e.g., Bond v. United States, 572 U.S. 844, 866 (2014); see generally Samuel L. Bray, The Mischief Rule, 109 Geo. L. J. 967 (2021) (explaining the history of this rule; collecting cases). Courts can thus properly draw the statute’s meaning from “the context from which the statute arose”—especially where a statute is designed to “address” a particular “problem.” Bond, 572 U.S. at 866 (first quote); In re Fairfield Sentry Ltd., __ F.4th __, 2025 WL 2218836, at *13 (2d Cir. 2025) (second one); see also TRW Inc., 534 U.S. at 29 (identifying that courts should avoid an interpretation that is “contrary to Congress’ apparent intent”). And so, as specifically relevant here, a statute should be interpreted to prevent “clever evasions” that would allow the legislatively addressed problem to continue. Bray, The Mischief Rule, 109 Geo. L. J. at 1005–07.³⁷

These mischief-rule principles confirm that an administration cannot extend an interim appointee’s term past Section 546(c)’s 120-day limit by invoking Section 3345. That 120-day limit was enacted in 2007 to combat a particular problem: the indefinite replacement of Senate-confirmed U.S. Attorneys with non-confirmed “interim” appointments. The context is instructive. In early 2006, and with minimal public discussion, Congress removed all time limits on non-confirmed “interim” U.S. Attorney appointments.³⁸ Then, in December 2006, the Executive Branch capitalized on its newly expanded “interim” appointment powers by firing

³⁷ See, e.g., AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion, 563 U.S. 333, 339 (2011) (identifying that the Federal Arbitration Act “was enacted in 1925 in response to widespread judicial hostility to arbitration agreements,” and reading the savings clause of that Act narrowly to prevent circumvention of that legislative direction); NLRB v. Hearst Pubs., 322 U.S. 111, 126 (1944) (reading “employee” to cover independent contractors because “[t]he mischief at which the Act is aimed and the remedies it offers are not confined exclusively to ‘employees’ within the traditional legal distinctions separating them from ‘independent contractors’”), *superseded by statute as recognized by Nationwide Mut.  2 confirmed “interim” appointees.³⁹ Such moves, members of Congress worried,
 3 would permit the Executive Branch to improperly skirt the Senate confirmation
 4 process—and undermine longstanding Senate practice favoring home-state Senator
 5 input in the selection of U.S. Attorneys (the so-called “blue slip” process).⁴⁰ In 6 response, shortly after the Executive Branch began installing its “interim” U.S.

 11 has asked several outstanding U.S. attorneys from around the country to resign 12 their positions. . . . We also understand the Attorney General has or is planning to 22 gaining this increased authority to appoint interim United States Attorneys

18 ⁴⁰ See, e.g., 153 Cong. Rec. S1993-01 (daily ed. Feb. 15, 2007) (statement of 19 Sen. Leahy, Senate cosponsor) (expressing concern that an interim U.S. Attorney 20 for the Eastern District of Arkansas had been named without “an agreement with 21 the two home State Senators”; “Why were home State Senators not consulted in 22 advance?”); 153 Cong. Rec. H5553-01 (daily ed. May 22, 2007) (statement of Rep.
 23 Sanchez) (expressing concern about an Executive Branch e-mail suggesting that an interim appointment would allow “the Justice Department [to] ‘give far less deference to home-State Senators and thereby get (1) our preferred person appointed and (2) do it far faster and more efficiently, at less political cost to the White House.’”); id. (statement of Rep. Jackson-Lee) (“The President usually accepts

 ‘Senatorial courtesy,’ serves as an informal check on the President’s appointment

1 Attorneys, Senators Feinstein and Leahy introduced what would eventually 2 become Section 546(c).⁴¹

3 The result was a 120-day limit designed to prevent lengthy use of non-4 confirmed U.S. Attorneys—the core issue here. As an assortment of recent 5 members of Congress described to the Giraud court, “[t]he Act reflected Congress’s
 6 considered judgment—rooted in the Constitution’s separation of powers
 7 framework—that the appointment of U.S. Attorneys must be subject to meaningful
 8 checks, including the Senate’s advice and consent, except in limited circumstances
 9 expressly provided by law.” Giraud, No. 24-cr-768, ECF No. 138-2, at 1 (Proposed 10 Br. of Amici Former Republican Members of Congress) (D.N.J. Aug. 13, 2025).
 11 Contemporaneous Congressional analysis likewise identified the time limit would 12 prevent administrations from subverting the Senate’s confirmation role beyond the 13 120-day limit.⁴²

14 Most significantly, drafters also specifically understood their efforts to 15 prevent the Executive Branch from doing precisely what the administration is 16 trying to do here. In particular, in the wake of the 2007 Act’s passage, Senator 17

18
 19 ⁴¹ See S. 214, 110th Cong. (2007). The bill was eventually passed 94–2 in the 20 Senate and 306–114 in the House as the Preserving United States Attorney Independence Act of 2007.

21 ⁴² See, e.g., 153 Cong. Rec. H5553-01 (daily ed. May 22, 2007) (statement of 22 Rep. Conyers, House cosponsor) (identifying that the Act would limit the Executive 23 Branch from “appoint[ing] interim temporary U.S. attorneys without the customary safeguard of Senate confirmation”); id. (statement of Rep. Sanchez) (“This would ensure that interim U.S. Attorneys appointed since the purge scheme was hatched are not permitted to serve indefinitely and without Senate confirmation.”).

1 Patrick Leahy (co-sponsor of the Section 546(c) amendment and then-Senate
2 Judiciary Committee Chairman) described the “sequential[]” interim-plus-acting 3 maneuver—like the one at issue here—as an “erroneous” interpretation of the 4 Section 546(c) amendments that “runs afoul of congressional intent and the law”:

5 Yet, even as we closed one loophole, the administration has been 6 exploiting others to continue to avoid coming to the Senate. Under the 7 guidance of an erroneous opinion of the Justice Department’s Office of 8 Legal Counsel, the administration has been naming acting U.S.
9 attorneys and interim U.S. attorneys sequentially. They have used
10 this misguided approach to put somebody in place for 330 days
11 without the advice and consent of the Senate. This approach runs 12 afoul of congressional intent and the law.

13 153 Cong. Rec. S15227-01 (daily ed. Dec. 12, 2007) (Statement of Sen. Leahy);
14 accord Statement of Senator Patrick Leahy to the Senate Judiciary Committee, 15 2008 WL 189313 (Jan. 22, 2008) (similar, describing an administration’s attempted 16 interim-plus-acting maneuver as an “erroneous” use of “the Vacancies Act”). The 17 administration’s apparent efforts to accomplish just that here requires judicial 18 scrutiny.

19 * * *

20 The U.S.-Attorney-specific 120-day limit of Section 546(c) governs over the 21 more general FVRA limits here. Otherwise, the district court’s 150-plus-years-old
22 statutory appointment power—and the Senate’s constitutional advice-and-consent 23 duty—are rendered insignificant. All that is particularly troubling because Congress enacted Section 546(c) to address just this sort of “mischief.” The Court should thus hold that Ms. Chattah’s time as U.S. Attorney was capped at 120 days under Section 546(c), despite the administration’s invocation of Section 3345.

C. The Appointments Clause requires an interim or acting U.S. Attorney to be Senate-confirmed.

If the Court concludes that Ms. Chattah’s ongoing service as acting U.S. Attorney complies with the governing statutes, it will be ratifying a vacancy scheme in which the Attorney General can designate never-confirmed individuals to serve as interim or acting U.S. Attorneys potentially in perpetuity. Such a regime is incompatible with the Appointments Clause, which requires Senate confirmation for all principal officers, including individuals serving in a permanent or lengthy temporary capacity as U.S. Attorneys.

1. U.S. Attorneys are principal officers requiring Senate confirmation.

The Supreme Court has historically offered differing modes of analysis for distinguishing between principal and inferior officers. Under any of these articulations, U.S. Attorneys are principal officers who must be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. U.S. Const. art. II, § 2, cl. 2.⁴³ The same requirement applies to temporary U.S. Attorneys in the circumstances at issue here, as described in the next section below.

The Supreme Court addressed the distinction between principal and inferior officers in Morrison v. Olson, 487 U.S. 654 (1988), and in Edmond v. United States, 520 U.S. 651 (1997). Four factors supported the inferior-officer status conclusion in Morrison: “that the independent counsel was subject to removal by a higher officer ⁴³ The Supreme Court has never directly addressed this question. Dicta in Myers v. United States suggested that U.S. Attorneys are inferior officers, but the issue was not before the Court in that case concerning a postmaster’s removal. 272 U.S. 52, 159 (1926).

1 (the Attorney General), that she performed only limited duties, that her jurisdiction
2 was narrow, and that her tenure was limited.” Edmond, 520 U.S. at 661 (citing
3 Morrison, 487 U.S. at 671–72). Each of those factors cuts the other way here.
4 U.S. Attorneys are removable only by the President, not the Attorney General. 28
5 U.S.C. § 541(c). Their sweeping duties include “prosecut[ing] all offenses against 6 the United States,” id. § 547(1), and litigating “all civil actions, suits or proceedings
7 in which the United States is concerned,” id. § 547(2). They serve as “the chief
8 federal law enforcement official for the judicial district,” Nadler v. Mann, 951 F.2d 9 301, 305 (11th Cir. 1992) (citing id. §§ 541, 547)—here, that jurisdiction covers an 10 entire state and its population of over 3 million people. Their tenure is not limited 11 to specific matters or tasks, and their four-year terms continue indefinitely until a 12 “successor is appointed and qualifies.” 28 U.S.C. § 541(b).

13 Edmond clarified that Morrison’s factors did not constitute a “definitive test.”
14 520 U.S. at 661. But many of the factors emphasized in Edmond are likewise
15 absent as to U.S. Attorneys. No Senate-confirmed officer (like the Attorney 16 General) exercises the “powerful tool for control” that is removal from office. Id.
17 at 664. And U.S. Attorneys routinely and unilaterally “render a final decision on 18 behalf of the United States,” id. at 665, for example, by exercising “plenary 19 authority with regard to federal criminal matters” “within” their districts, and 20 through “authorization[] to take all necessary steps to protect the interests of the 21
23

1 United States” “in a great many instances” of civil litigation, see U.S. Dep’t of Just.,
2 Just. Manual §§ 4-1.300, 9-2.001.⁴⁴

3 The fact that the Attorney General supervises the work of U.S. Attorneys in 4 some respects does not defeat their status as principal officers. Even extensive
5 supervision and oversight by a Senate-confirmed official cannot render supervisees
6 inferior if they exercise significant and binding executive authority on their own.
7 See United States v. Arthrex, Inc., 594 U.S. 1, 16–17 (2021). In finding an 8 Appointments Clause problem with respect to Administrative Patent Judges, the 9 Supreme Court explained, “In all the ways that matter to the parties who appear 10 before the [Patent Trial and Appeal Board], the buck stops with the APJs, not with 11 the Secretary or Director.” Id. at 17; see also Intercollegiate Broad. Sys., Inc. v.
12 Copyright Royalty Bd., 684 F.3d 1332, 1339 (D.C. Cir. 2012) (“We find that, given
13 the [Copyright Royalty Judges’] nonremovability and the finality of their decisions
14 . . . the Librarian’s and Register’s supervision functions still fall far short of the 15 kind that would render the CRJs inferior officers.”). So, too, with U.S. Attorneys.
16 For the mine-run of defendants, the local U.S. Attorney’s Office initiates the 17 prosecution, controls dismissal, and negotiates binding plea agreements without 18 approval or review by Washington, D.C. The buck stops with them—not the 19 Attorney General.

20 Arthrex demonstrates why the Ninth Circuit previously erred in concluding 21 that U.S. Attorneys are inferior officers. See Gantt, 194 F.3d at 999–1000. The

22
23 ⁴⁴ Available at <https://www.justice.gov/jm/jm-9-2000-authority-us-attorney-criminal-division-mattersprior-approvals#9-2.001>.

1 Gantt panel relied on the Attorney General’s statutory authority to reassign cases,
2 set salaries, and approve reimbursements. Id. At the same time, without any 3 reasoning, it brushed aside a “significant statutory limit on the Attorney General’s
4 supervision of United States Attorneys,” i.e., “Congress’ decision to vest
5 appointment and removal power in the President.” Id. at 1000. Arthrex squarely
6 undermined Gantt’s analysis. The Administrative Patent Judges in Arthrex were 7 subject to comprehensive administrative supervision and the threat of reassignment
8 by superior officers, but they were not removable by the Secretary of Commerce at-9 will. 594 U.S. at 15–17. That supervision did not cure the Appointments Clause
10 problem in Arthrex, and it does not do so here. Because Gantt is “clearly 11 irreconcilable with” Arthrex, this Court is bound by the latter and should “reject
12 [Gantt] as having been effectively overruled.” Miller v. Gammie, 335 F.3d 889, 900
13 (9th Cir. 2003) (en banc).

14 2. Temporary U.S. Attorneys serving lengthy terms are 15 principal officers requiring Senate confirmation.

16 Ms. Chattah’s designation as an interim or acting U.S. Attorney does not 17 solve the constitutional problem. Unbounded by the time limitations imposed by 18 Congress, the administration may view Ms. Chattah’s service as temporary in name 19 only—so her service therefore requires Senate confirmation.

20 Courts have historically conferred inferior-officer status on individuals 21 designated to serve temporarily in roles that would otherwise be categorized as 22 principal officers. See, e.g., United States v. Eaton, 169 U.S. 331, 343–44 (1898)
23

1 (acting Consul General); Rop v. Fed. Hous. Fin. Agency, 50 F.4th 562, 569–74 (6th
2 Cir. 2022) (acting Federal Housing Finance Agency Director).

3 But that principle has always presumed compliance with the significant 4 limitations imposed by Congress on temporary service. Officials acting on a 5 temporary basis are inferior when they serve “for a limited time, and under special
6 and temporary conditions.” Eaton, 169 U.S. at 343. In Rop, the Sixth Circuit
7 recognized “concerns that a President could abuse [a vacancy] provision by 8 unilaterally firing the [Federal Housing Finance Agency] Director and indefinitely
9 replacing him with an Acting Director, with no intent of ever seeking the advice and 10 consent of the Senate.” 50 F.4th at 571. Those concerns were “alleviate[d]” because 11 Congress can set limits on the President’s ability to fill vacancies, including by 12 restricting the circumstances in which the vacancy can be filled and by setting a 13 time limit on the acting official’s service. Id.; accord id. at 585 (Thapar, J., 14 concurring in part and dissenting in part) (rejecting the proposition that an acting 15 official can constitutionally “perform every function of his office indefinitely, with no
16 end in sight” and “limited only by the President’s inclination to appoint a 17 successor”).

18 The government’s current approach to designating temporary 19 U.S. Attorneys—potentially in perpetuity—carries insufficient limitations and 20 therefore violates the Appointments Clause. As Justice Thomas has explained, 21 there is “nothing ‘special and temporary’ about” indefinite acting service in a 22 principal-officer role, and “the structural protections of the Appointments Clause”
23 cannot “be avoided based on such trivial distinctions” like merely labeling someone

1 an acting official. NLRB v. SW Gen., Inc., 580 U.S. 288, 313 n.1 (2017) (Thomas, J., 2 concurring).

3 The Court can and should resolve this motion based on the statutory 4 arguments set out above. But if it concludes that Ms. Chattah's acting service
 5 complies with the governing statutes as a technical matter, the Constitution
 6 provides a backstop, and the Court should reject Ms. Chattah's continued service as 7 incompatible with the Appointments Clause. At a minimum, it should resolve the 8 statutory arguments in the defense's favor to avoid these substantial constitutional 9 concerns.

10 II. The appropriate remedy is to dismiss the indictment and for the 11 judges of this district to select an interim U.S. Attorney.

12 Because Ms. Chattah is not validly serving as the acting U.S. Attorney, the 13 Court should apply an appropriate remedy. Cf. Lucia v. SEC, 585 U.S. 237, 251
 14 (2018) (“[O]ne who makes a timely challenge to the constitutional validity of the 15 appointment of an officer who adjudicates his case is entitled to relief.”) (cleaned 16 up). The Court should dismiss the indictment with or without prejudice.
 17 Alternatively, it should disqualify Ms. Chattah from service as acting U.S. Attorney, 18 along with any attorneys acting under her direction. Finally, the judges of this 19 district should then select an interim U.S. Attorney under Section 546(d).

20 A. The Court should dismiss the indictment or, at a minimum, 21 disqualify Ms. Chattah.

22 On information and belief, Ms. Chattah purported to approve this 23 prosecution in her capacity as acting U.S. Attorney by authorizing the signing and filing of the indictment on August 13, 2025. Because the signing and filing

1 postdates July 26 (the end of her interim service), the indictment is invalid, and the 2 Court should dismiss it.

3 U.S. Attorneys control federal prosecutions within their districts. Under 28
4 U.S.C. § 547, the U.S. attorney “shall—(1) prosecute all offenses against the United 5 States” in the district. “The United States Attorney, within his/her district, has 6 plenary authority with regard to federal criminal matters.” U.S. Dep’t of Just.,
7 Just. Manual § 9-2.001. “The authority is exercised under the supervision and 8 direction of the Attorney General and his/her delegates.” Id. The U.S. Attorney has 9 a “statutory duty” under Section 547 “to prosecute for all offenses against the 10 United States.” Id. The position carries “the broadest discretion in the exercise of 11 such authority.” Id. “The authority, discretionary power, and responsibilities of the 12 United States Attorney with relation to criminal matters encompass,” among other 13 things, “[i]nvestigating suspected or alleged offenses,” “[d]eclining prosecution,” 14 “[a]uthorizing prosecution,” and “[d]etermining the manner of prosecuting and 15 deciding trial related questions.” Id.

16 Because the U.S. Attorney decides whether to authorize a prosecution, and 17 because Ms. Chattah lacked statutory authority to serve as acting U.S. Attorney 18 (and thus authorize the filing of the indictment when it was filed), the indictment in 19 this case is invalid. The Court should remedy the error by dismissing the 20 indictment. See United States v. Trump, 740 F. Supp. 3d 1245, 1302–04 (S.D. Fla.
21 2024) (concluding the appropriate remedy for an invalidly appointed prosecutor is to 22 dismiss the indictment). Among other reasons, dismissal of the indictment is: (1)
23 necessary because the invalid indictment implicates Mr. Jackson’s constitutional

1 right to procedural due process; and (2) appropriate under the court’s inherent 2 supervisory authority to dismiss an indictment based on government misconduct.
 3 See, e.g., United States v. Bundy, 968 F.3d 1019, 1030–31 (9th Cir. 2020) (explaining 4 a court may dismiss an indictment when government misconduct creates “a due-5 process violation” or implicates a court’s “supervisory powers [to] protect[] the 6 integrity of the federal courts”).⁴⁵ When an invalidly serving acting U.S. Attorney
 7 purports to authorize a prosecution, the defendant is deprived of the “statutory 8 [and] constitutional right” to have a duly appointed or designated (as opposed to an 9 invalid) U.S. Attorney approve the proceedings. Id. at 1030. Dismissal is an 10 appropriate remedy “to deter future illegal conduct,” i.e., future illegally authorized 11 prosecutions. Id. (cleaned up).

15 ⁴⁵ In the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Gantt, the defendant alleged the 16 government’s interlocutory appeal was improper because the relevant statute
 17 requires the U.S. Attorney personally to certify the appeal, and the defendant
 18 maintained the interim U.S. Attorney who certified the appeal was invalidly 19 appointed. Gantt suggested in dicta that even if an interim U.S. Attorney were 20 invalidly appointed, the invalid appointment would not necessarily render an 21 indictment defective because, under Criminal Rule 7(c)(1), an indictment “need only 22 be signed by an ‘attorney for the government,’” not the U.S. Attorney specifically.
 23 194 F.3d at 998. Because this statement was dicta and not germane to the case’s resolution, it should be deemed nonbinding. See, e.g., Stein v. Kaiser Found. Health Plan, Inc., 115 F.4th 1244, 1248–54 (9th Cir. 2024) (en banc) (Forrest, J., concurring) (discussing the nature of dicta). Binding or not, the case provides scant guidance on the remedial question here, because the defense’s argument depends not on the Criminal Rules but on the U.S. Attorney’s obligation under 28 U.S.C.
 § 547 and the Justice Manual to authorize a prosecution. Nor did Gantt involve an argument for dismissal based on a due process violation or a court’s inherent supervisory powers. If the Court concludes Gantt is binding with respect to remedy, the defense preserves a challenge to the decision for further review.

1 The dismissal should be with prejudice, not without. See Bundy, 968 F.3d at 2 1031 (recognizing both options can potentially be appropriate).⁴⁶ That remedy is 3 consistent with the remedy in Section 3348(d)(1), which provides that “[a]n action 4 taken by any person who is not” properly serving as an acting officer “in the 5 performance of any function or duty of a vacant office . . . shall have no force or 6 effect.” Under Section 3348(d)(2), such actions “may not be ratified” later. This 7 “Ratification Bar . . . applies only to those duties of an officer that are 8 nondelegable.” Gonzales, 107 F.4th at 1073. The nondelegable duties can be 9 created either by statute or regulation. See 5 U.S.C. § 3348(a)(2). The statutory 10 and regulatory schemes provide no indication the U.S. Attorney may delegate the 11 decision whether to authorize the filing of an indictment to another employee—
12 indeed, the Justice Manual suggests the decision belongs to the U.S. Attorney 13 specifically. Thus, the Court should dismiss the indictment with prejudice.
14 Otherwise, if the Court dismissed the indictment without prejudice, and if a duly 15 directed or appointed acting, interim, or permanent U.S. Attorney were to refile the 16 indictment, the refiled indictment would violate the ratification bar.⁴⁷

18 ⁴⁶ See also United States v. Williams, 65 F.R.D. 422, 448 (W.D. Mo. 1974)
19 (dismissing with prejudice because the prosecutors lacked authority to act within 20 the district); United States v. Huston, 28 F.2d 451, 456 (N.D. Ohio 1928) (setting 21 aside the indictment for similar reasons but failing to specify whether the remedy was with or without prejudice); United States v. Rosenthal, 121 F. 862, 874 (C.C.S.D.N.Y. 1903) (similar).

22 ⁴⁷ Cf. United States v. Harmon, 833 F.3d 1199, 1204 (9th Cir. 2016) 23 (explaining certain grand jury errors are structural and thus cognizable on appeal after a guilty verdict); United States v. Plesinski, 912 F.2d 1033, 1038 (9th Cir.

1 In addition, dismissal with prejudice is necessary to fully “deter future illegal
 2 conduct.” Bundy, 968 F.3d at 1030 (cleaned up). This remedy is the only 3 appropriate way to deter the administration’s improper attempts, spanning 4 multiple districts, to circumvent congressional limits on acting or interim officers.
 5 A lesser remedy will insufficiently deter similar conduct in the future.

6 In the alternative, the Court should dismiss the indictment without 7 prejudice, subject to refile after authorization by a duly directed or appointed 8 acting, interim, or permanent U.S. Attorney. See United States v. Peralta-Ramirez, 9 83 F. Supp. 2d 263, 271 (D.P.R. 2000) (ordering dismissal without prejudice), 10 reversed on other grounds, United States v. Hilario, 218 F.3d 19 (1st Cir. 2000).

11 If the Court concludes dismissal of the indictment is an unavailable remedy, 12 the Court should at a minimum disqualify Ms. Chattah from participation in or 13 supervision of this case. See Giraud, 2025 WL 2416737, at *30; see also Giraud, 14 2025 WL 2196794, at *7–11. The Court should also disqualify any attorneys acting
 15 under her direction. See Giraud, 2025 WL 2416737, at *30; see also Giraud, 2025
 16 WL 2196794 at *9–11 (concluding that if Assistant U.S. Attorneys in the district

18 1990) (concluding the mere presence of an unauthorized prosecutor at a grand jury
 19 proceeding did not require dismissal of the indictment because the individual’s 20 “presence as an observer” did not “substantially influence[] the grand jury’s decision 21 to indict him”) (cleaned up); cf. also SW General, 796 F.3d at 78 (explaining the 22 acting officer who authorized a labor complaint was serving invalidly; noting the 23 petitioner’s argument that the proceedings under the complaint were therefore invalid; stating, “[i]f the violation had occurred in the typical federal office, we might agree” with the petitioner’s argument; but noting the ratification bar exempts the labor board); SW General, 580 U.S. at 298 n.2 (explaining there was no request for certiorari on the remedial question); Hooks, 816 F.3d at 564 (noting the parties agreed the proper remedy was to dismiss the labor board complaint despite the exemption provision).

1 were, as a matter of fact, taking direction from the invalidly appointed acting U.S.
2 Attorney as opposed to the Attorney General, disqualification would be
3 appropriate). The proceedings in this case should then be stayed until a proper
4 acting, interim, or permanent U.S. Attorney is serving in this district. In that 5 event, the defense would anticipate filing a motion to reopen detention under 18
6 U.S.C. § 3142(f).

7 B. The judges of this district should select an interim U.S.
8 Attorney.

9 As explained above, Ms. Chattah is not properly serving as acting U.S.
10 Attorney. The Court therefore retains authority under Section 546(d) to appoint a 11 new interim U.S. Attorney for the district.

12 Ms. Chattah's appointment as interim U.S. Attorney expired on or about July 13 26, 2025, and there is not a proper acting or permanent U.S. Attorney serving in the 14 position, so the vacancy created by Mr. Frierson's resignation remains unfilled.

15 Assuming Ms. Chattah term instead expired on or about July 30, the same 16 conclusion follows. While Ms. Chattah purported to resign as interim U.S. Attorney 17 on July 28, her resignation was not a bona fide resignation as explained above, so it
18 failed to prevent the expiration of her tenure under the statute. Even if her 19 resignation were timely and bona fide, Section 546(d) should be understood to apply 20 when an interim officer resigns shortly before the expiration of the term.

21 Otherwise, the administration could avoid the provision entirely, through the 22 simple expediency of indefinitely stacking successive interim appointments, with 23 the interim appointees repeatedly resigning on or about day 119 of their

1 appointment and with the administration reappointing them (or someone else)
2 thereafter. This interpretation would render subsection (d) superfluous, see Giraud, 3 2025 WL 2416737, at *10–12, so the Court should avoid that reading of the 4 statute.⁴⁸

5 Because Ms. Chattah’s period as interim U.S. Attorney has expired, the 6 judges of this district should exercise their authority to appoint a new interim U.S.
7 Attorney.

20 ⁴⁸ Then-Deputy Assistant Attorney General Samuel A. Alito took the position
21 in a memorandum for the Office of Legal Counsel that Section 546 allows the 22 administration only a single appointment period. The Attorney General cannot 23 “make another appointment . . . after the expiration of the 120-day period. The statutory plan discloses a Congressional purpose that after the expiration of the 120-day period further interim appointments are to be made by the court rather than by the Attorney General.” United States v. Pina, No. 25-cr-436, ECF No. 61-1 at 4 (D.N.J. Aug. 14, 2025).

1 CONCLUSION

2 The Court should dismiss the indictment with prejudice; dismiss the 3 indictment without prejudice; or disqualify Ms. Chattah and any attorneys acting 4 under her direction.

5 Dated: August 26, 2025.
