<sup>1</sup> Motion to Dismiss the Indictment With Prejudice Due to Repeated and Intentional Government Misconduct (“Motion to Dismiss”), May 9, 2011 (Docket Entry 505); Reply Brief in Support of Motion to Dismiss (“Reply”), June 17, 2011 (Docket Entry 614); Supplemental Brief in Support of Motion to Dismiss (“Supplemental Brief” or “Supp. Brief”), July 25, 2011 (Docket Entry 632).

1                   MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2                   I. INTRODUCTION

3                   From at least October 2008, the prosecution engaged in a course of 4 misconduct that was both flagrant and prejudicial. Among other things, the 5 prosecutors inserted false factual statements into their agent's search warrant 6 affidavit;<sup>2</sup> failed to bring those statements to the agent's attention; repeatedly used 7 affidavits containing these falsehoods for searches and seizures; changed the 8 contents of proposed search warrant authorizations from language that comported 9 with the Fourth Amendment to language that allowed the case agents to conduct 10 general searches of electronically stored information; allowed false testimony to be 11 presented to the grand jury; shielded that false testimony and other falsehoods and 12 failures in the investigation from disclosure to the grand jury, the Court and the 13 Lindsey-Lee Defendants (hereinafter "defendants"); failed to comply with 14 disclosure orders and with Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963); failed to 15 comply with this Court's limiting instructions; and improperly and prejudicially 16 argued willful blindness to the jury. The prosecution's misconduct is detailed in 17 the Motion to Dismiss, filed May 9, 2011, the Reply in Support of the Motion to 18 Dismiss, filed June 17, 2011, and the Supplemental Brief in Support of the Motion 19 to Dismiss, filed July 25, 2011, and is not repeated herein.

20                  This brief addresses the erroneous arguments made, and the inapposite or 21 incorrect legal authorities cited, in the prosecutors' Response to the Defendants'

22

23                  <sup>2</sup> All three trial prosecutors submitted declarations attached to the 24 prosecution's September 5, 2011 filing. Mr. Goldberg's declaration sets forth his 25 late entry into this case and disclaims personal responsibility for certain actions.
 26 Declaration of Jeffrey A. Goldberg, September 5, 2011 (Docket Entry 642) at ¶¶ 27 2-3. The Motion to Dismiss, the Reply, the Supplemental Brief, and the 28 Supplemental Reply, significantly, focus on a course of conduct involving the prosecution team and only identify individuals when necessary to the description of a particular action.

1 Supplemental Brief, filed September 5, 2011 (hereinafter “Supplemental 2 Opposition” or “Supp. Opp.”). For the reasons set forth in the previously filed 3 papers in support of the motion and in this brief, defendants’ Motion to Dismiss 4 should be granted.<sup>3</sup>

5 II. THE PROSECUTION’S PATTERN OF REPEATED MISCONDUCT 6 BEGAN WITH ITS INVESTIGATION

7 A. The November 2008 Search Warrant<sup>4</sup> Contained False 8 Statements Inserted By The Prosecutors And Did Not 9 Comport With Tamura Principles; The Prosecutors 10 Unfairly And Improperly Hid Their Knowing Involvement 11 In Both The False Statements And The Tamura Violation

12 ///

13
 14 15       <sup>3</sup> The prosecution begins the introduction to its Supplemental Opposition by 16 trying to justify its errors based on how “complex” this case was. It notes that this 17 was a “seven-year bribery conspiracy . . .” Supp. Opp. at p. 1. It then notes this 18 was a “complex multi-year grand jury investigation with international 19 dimensions.” Id. Of course, only Agent Guernsey and one other witness testified 20 to the grand jury that returned the First Superseding Indictment. (And only Agent 21 Guernsey and two other witnesses testified to the earlier grand jury that returned 22 the initial Indictment against the Aguilars). Both grand juries were provided with 23 very few documents. And the interviews of significant witnesses actually occurred 24 after indictment – from October 2010 onward. If there was a complex, multi-year 25 investigation, it was of ABB, an entity completely unrelated to LMC, and was 26 largely conducted by ABB’s own attorneys.

27       <sup>4</sup> The prosecution’s Supplemental Opposition proclaims that the defense no 28 longer finds fault with the warrantless searches conducted of two LMC buildings on November 20, 2008. Supp. Opp. at p. 8, n. 6. That is incorrect. The defense has always argued that the warrantless searches were improper. The prosecution represented, however, that it found no evidence in these searches (March 25, 2011, RT at 26:13-16, 28:13-23), and, thus, the suppression of evidence would be a moot remedy (March 25, 2011, RT at 29:22 – 30:10). Significantly, the prosecution never carried its burden by proving the warrantless searches comported with the

1                   1. The Prosecutors Invented Facts And Inserted Them
 2                   Into The Search Warrant Affidavit With No Cause
 3                   And Without Consulting The Affiant Or Other 4                   Agents, An Unprecedented Example Of Misconduct<sup>5</sup>

5                  There is no dispute that the November 20, 2008 search warrant affidavit 6 contained two false factual statements – both of which stated that LMC made 7 several large payments to Sorvill International, S.A. (“Sorvill”).<sup>6</sup> There is no 8 dispute that the prosecutors themselves inserted these false factual statements 9 without consulting the affiant and without having a basis for believing these 10 “facts” to be true.<sup>7</sup> There is no dispute that these false statements appeared in 12                 Fourth Amendment. March 25, 2011, RT at 23:8 – 30:10.

13                 The prosecutors continued to submit search/seizure warrants and affidavits 14 with the false facts through October 2010; this was even after the false factual 15 statements were corrected in another affidavit by the original affiant. Significantly, 16 the original affiant, Agent Binder, continued using the affidavit with the false facts 17 (see August 27, 2010 Dream Seeker Yacht seizure warrant (Farrell Binder 18 affidavit); October 5, 2010 Dream Seeker Yacht seizure warrant (second 19 application) (Farrell Binder affidavit)), as did other case agents (see, e.g., October 20 5, 2010 Banco Popular Account seizure warrant (Rodolfo Mendoza affidavit)).
 21 Each time the false affidavit was used, one of the prosecutors in this matter 22 submitted the warrant with the false affidavit to a federal court.

23                 Government Trial Exhibit 30 (“summary” chart of payments connecting 24 LMC to Sorvill with colored lines) (attached hereto as Exhibit A), and Guernsey 25 grand jury Exhibit 1 (chart connecting LMC to Sorvill, used during both the 26 September 8 and October 14, 2010 grand juries) (attached hereto as Exhibit B), 27 reflect how critical this was to the prosecution’s theory of the case. Among other 28 things, it provided a (false) link between LMC and the ABB misconduct regarding Sorvill.

29                 Even though these statements were untrue and clearly Brady, the prosecution 30 refused to acknowledge their falsity until ordered to do so by the Court. On 31 February 22, 2011, in response to a defense request for this information, the Court 32 ordered the prosecution to disclose “every shred of evidence” that reflected that 33 LMC made payments to Sorvill. February 22, 2011, RT at 29:2-9. Not one shred
 34 REPLY TO GOVERNMENT’S OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS’ SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF
 IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT

1 affidavits through October 2010, even after Agent Binder noted the falsity of those 2 statements, and changed them in at least one affidavit in 2010.

3       The prosecution asks the Court to overlook this unique misconduct, since the 4 Court already denied the defendants' Franks Motion. Supp. Opp. at pp. 8-9. This 5 argument – a non sequitur at best – misses two critical points. First, this is a 6 Motion to Dismiss, not a Franks Motion. Here, the focus is on the prosecutors' 7 course of conduct requiring dismissal. Inserting false facts into a search warrant 8 affidavit without any basis, and then repeatedly using that false affidavit many 9 times during a two-year period is clearly prosecutorial misconduct.

10      Second, when the Franks Motion was filed, and before Agent Binder 11 testified at the Franks hearing, the prosecutors never acknowledged their personal 12 responsibility for the invention and inclusion of these false statements. In fact, the 13 prosecution completely ignored defendants' Brady request for the production of 14 drafts of the search warrant affidavit – disclosing them only after the Franks
 15 hearing, pursuant to a Court order. March 23, 2011, RT at 58:13-18; Order, March 16 23, 2011 (Docket Entry 333). The truth about the prosecutors' role was revealed in 17 the testimony of Agent Binder, during the hearing on the Franks Motion.<sup>8</sup> March 18 23, 2011, RT at 13:11 – 21:14; 32:11 – 34:11; 58:22 – 60:8.

19 _____
 20 of evidence supporting those facts was produced. This omission was a potent 21 acknowledgment of their falsity. And the implication in the prosecution's 22 Supplemental Opposition that it – the prosecution – voluntarily produced this 23 information – is not true. As is clear from the record, the prosecution did not make 24 an affirmative disclosure of this at all. Instead, by virtue of not disclosing 25 information when ordered by the Court to disclose the evidence it had, the 26 prosecution acknowledged the falsity of the search warrant affidavit.

27      No one disputes Agent Binder's testimony that the prosecutors inserted these 28 false facts without her knowledge, and without consulting her. Indeed, had Agent Binder lied at the Franks hearing, that would be Brady, and the prosecution would have had to notify the defense of this lie. The prosecutors' silence on this matter confirms the veracity of Binder's testimony on this particular point.

1       The prosecution seeks to excuse its introduction of false factual statements 2 into the search warrant affidavit,<sup>9</sup> by arguing that “[p]rosecutors are almost always 3 involved in the drafting and editing of agents’ search warrant affidavits.” Supp.
 4 Opp. at p. 9. Of course, that is beside the point. And the cases on which it relies 5 are inapposite.

6       United States v. Lowe, 516 F.3d 580 (7th Cir. 2008), involved a challenge to 7 a search warrant. In Lowe, the Seventh Circuit found that there was no Fourth 8 Amendment violation where the prosecutor incorrectly changed the name of one 9 agent to another throughout the affidavit, when the affiant was changed at the last 10 minute. Id. at 583-86. But the present case is not a case of sloppy drafting like 11 Lowe.<sup>10</sup> Here, the prosecutors themselves intentionally inserted false facts.

12       And United States v. Campbell, 878 F.2d 170 (6th Cir. 1989), is nothing like 13 the unique situation here. In Campbell, the defense argued that, since the case 14 agent went to law school and a prosecutor helped him with the affidavit, the 15 warrant should be held to a higher standard than other warrants. Id. at 173. But 16 that is not the case here. The defense here is not asking that this warrant be held to 17 a higher standard. Instead, the defendants contend that the actions of one or more 18 of the prosecutors’ inventing facts without basis, and inserting them into a warrant

 21       <sup>9</sup> The prosecution has cited no case or doctrine (nor could it do so) that allows 22 prosecutors to invent facts and insert them in a search warrant affidavit.

23       <sup>10</sup> The prosecution complains that the defense cites no legal authority to 24 support the contention that a prosecutor commits misconduct by “inadvertently” 25 including an “inaccurate statement in a draft of a search warrant affidavit,” except 26 for a “ fleeting reference” to Brady. Supp. Opp. at p. 10. Of course, inventing facts 27 that have no basis and including them in a series of affidavits filed with several 28 federal courts is not an “inadvertent” inclusion of an “inaccurate statement in a draft” of a sworn search warrant affidavit. In any event, the Brady reference was a reference to the prosecution’s inexplicable failure to timely produce information about its role, something the prosecution never addresses.

1 affidavit (without even consulting the affiant), was part of the course of 2 prosecutorial misconduct.

3 Prosecutors cannot invent facts<sup>11</sup> and obtain warrants based on those “facts.” 4 That is not striking “hard blows,” it is striking “foul ones.” See Berger v. United 5 States, 295 U.S. 78, 88 (1935). And contrary to the prosecution’s suggestion, 6 securing a conviction does not excuse this misconduct.

 8                   Warrant Was Not Just “Clumsy” Language “No One 9                   Caught,” But Was Standard United States Attorney 10                  Language Purposefully Included In The Warrant

11                  The Court found that the provisions of the November 20, 2008 search 12 warrant that permitted the search of electronically stored information (“ESI”) did 13 not comport with the Fourth Amendment. However, the Court concluded that the 14 “good faith” exception applied to the problematic language and did not suppress 15 the evidence. March 25, 2011, RT at 49:19 – 52:3. The Court’s conclusion 16 followed a colloquy with counsel about a key provision of the warrant that the 17 Court suggested was the product of clumsy drafting, ultimately allowing the case 18 agents to conduct the general ESI search.

19                  In colloquy with the Court about the provision, the prosecution quickly 20 adopted the Court’s suggestion that the challenged language was just clumsy, 21 echoing the Court’s and the defense’s comments, and stating that “no one caught” 22 this language. March 25, 2011, RT at 43:4 – 45:6. However, the prosecution 23 failed to inform the Court that this challenged language was present in only three 24 versions of the 14 versions of the warrant (versions 10, 13, and 14).

25
 26                  <sup>11</sup> Significantly, while both Mr. Miller and Ms. Mrazek submitted declarations 27 in their Supplemental Opposition, neither addressed the insertion of the false facts 28 into the agent’s sworn affidavit or the repeated use of affidavits with these false facts through October 2010.

1        In its Supplemental Opposition, filed just three weeks ago – nearly six 2 months after the hearing on the Motion to Suppress – the prosecution now admits 3 that this was standard language used by the United States Attorney’s Office at the 4 time of the search. See Supp. Opp. at pp. 12-13. The prosecution admits for the 5 first time in its Supplemental Opposition that it purposely replaced the original 6 language, which comported with United States v. Tamura, 694 F.2d 591 (9th Cir.
 7 1982), with the language that did not comport with Tamura.

8        Yet until that time, the prosecution allowed the Court and defense counsel to 9 believe this was just clumsy drafting and not the official policy of the United States 10 Attorney’s Office. This was clearly misconduct.

11      B. Starting With Agent Guernsey’s First Grand Jury Appearance
 12      And Continuing Through The Summation, The Prosecution
 13      Sought To Connect LMC And ABB, So As To Establish A 14      “Pattern Of Bribery”

15        During Agent Guernsey’s first grand jury appearance on September 8, 2010, 16 and then again during her October 14, 2010 testimony, the prosecution displayed a 17 chart connecting LMC and ABB to Sorvill and Grupo in a single line. See Exhibit 18 B, grand jury Exhibit 1 (September 8, 2010)/grand jury Exhibit 1 (October 14, 19 2010). While the prosecution states in its Supplemental Opposition that, during its 20 grand jury presentation, it was “simply recount[ing] how the investigation 21 originated,” the true intention behind the prosecution’s attempts to connect LMC 22 and ABB is clear: it wanted the grand jurors to equate ABB’s illegal conduct with 23 the legitimate conduct of LMC. Supp. Opp. at p. 14.

24        The prosecutor’s questioning of Agent Guernsey and Guernsey’s testimony 25 to the grand jury illustrate the prosecution’s reliance on this false linkage. Agent 26 Guernsey described ABB and LMC as “the same type of company.” October 14, 27 2010, RT at 8:23-24; see also Supp. Brief at pp. 33-34, 44-46. No matter how the 28 prosecution tries to spin this testimony, the intent behind it was clear – guilt by
 IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT

1 association. If the prosecutors were truly attempting to “merely explain the origins 2 of the investigation,” it would not have created such an exhibit or sought to 3 misrepresent and confuse the relationship between ABB and LMC through Agent 4 Guernsey’s testimony.

5 The prosecution also tries to minimize its attempts to link ABB and LMC 6 through the testimony of Fernando Maya Basurto, arguing that the October 10, 7 2010 email from Ms. Mrazek to Mr. Basurto’s attorney does not support the 8 “accusation” that “Ms. Mrazek ‘asked Mr. Basurto to cooperate against [the 9 defendants]’ even though ‘he knew nothing’ about them.” See Supp. Opp. at p. 15, 10 n. 13 (citation omitted). In fact, the language of this email is unambiguous – it has 11 no other meaning. Moreover, the use of Mr. Basurto’s improper testimony about 12 ABB in a case that had nothing to do with ABB further establishes the 13 prosecution’s impermissible attempts to make this linkage.

14 The prosecution gives itself credit, because it did not mention ABB or Mr.
 15 Basurto during its opening statement or closing argument. However, this ignores 16 the fact that the Court denied the prosecution’s motion in limine seeking to 17 introduce ABB evidence at the Lindsey trial. April 1, 2011, RT at 16:3-16 18 (prosecution’s motion denied with leave to renew request to introduce at trial). By 19 closing arguments, the damage had been done – the prosecution had established the 20 improper connection in the minds of the jurors. And, the prosecution’s argument 21 overlooks the fact that its rebuttal argument highlighted the linkage again. See 22 Supp. Brief at p. 46 (citing May 6, 2011, RT at 4337:10-15).

23 The prosecution now argues that it made the Basurto-ABB-LMC connection 24 in an appropriate fashion, because the Court’s limiting instruction only applied to 25 Mr. Basurto’s second day of testimony. This is not true. It misconstrues and 26 misreads the Court’s comments. Before Mr. Basurto testified on the second day, 27 the Court stated:

1           I think it's fair to say that in that testimony, Mr. Basurto 2 testified before us about his role in an entirely different conspiracy 3 involving this company known as ABB. None of the defendants who 4 is in this courtroom have been accused of any involvement in that 5 conspiracy. None of the defendants in this courtroom have been 6 accused of having any role whatsoever in that case. This case, in 7 short, does not involve ABB. That's the other case.

8           I've instructed the prosecution to go no further in eliciting 9 testimony from this witness about that other case or about his role in 10 the other case, so we're not going to have any further testimony about 11 that.

12           The sole basis for allowing further testimony from this witness 13 in answer to questions that the government may pose will be about the 14 role that a company known as Sorvill International allegedly played in 15 this case and whether Enrique Aguilar, who is a defendant in this case, 16 but not here, had anything to do with whatever role that Sorvill 17 International may have played in this case. So that's going to be the 18 limit of the inquiry into the relevance.

19           Now, this defendant did testify yesterday, and the defense 20 attorneys will have the right, if they choose to, to cross-examine him 21 about his testimony yesterday and whatever remains of his testimony 22 today. But I instruct you now that the only issues that this witness's 23 testimony may have some bearing on -- and it's up to you to decide 24 how much, if any -- concern the allegations about Sorvill 25 International having played a role in the alleged crimes committed in 26 this case by the defendants in this case and whether Enrique Aguilar is 27 proved to have had any role in the conduct of Sorvill International.

28           April 7, 2011, RT at 784:14 – 785:19 (emphasis added).

29           The Court permitted the defense to cross-examine Mr. Basurto in an attempt 30 to ameliorate the harm caused by the prosecutor's misconduct.<sup>12</sup> But cross-31 examination does not relieve the prosecution of its obligations to act fairly and 32           <sup>12</sup> Mr. Basurto was led to the witness stand in front of the jury in jail clothes, 33 handcuffs and shackles. April 6, 2011, RT at 715:25 – 716:9. The indelible image 34 undoubtedly stayed with some jurors. It suggested guilt by association and 35 increased the prejudice to the defendants.

1 justly. And it does not excuse the mention of Mr. Basurto's testimony during the 2 prosecution's rebuttal and the use of that testimony against the defendants.
 3 Regardless of whether the argument was short or long, it was another of the 4 prosecution's improper actions.

5       C. The Prosecution Committed Misconduct Through Its Multiple 6       Attempts To Keep Agent Guernsey's Grand Jury Testimony
 7       From The Defense

8       The papers previously filed detail the falsity permeating Agent Guernsey's 9 grand jury testimony. Not only was there misconduct in the presentation of the 10 testimony of Agent Guernsey before the grand jury, but also in the prosecution's 11 purposeful attempts to keep that testimony from both the Court and the defense.<sup>13</sup>

12       We now know that Agent Guernsey testified in four grand jury sessions. On 13 June 27, 2011, Mr. Miller revealed he had produced only three of four days of her 14 testimony. Until June 27th, the defense believed that what the prosecution 15 disclosed on April 15, 2011 under Court order, was Agent Guernsey's complete 16 grand jury testimony.

17       This is now followed by a new "revelation" in Mr. Miller's September 5, 18 2011 declaration.

19       On January 24, 2011, the Court ordered the prosecution to file in camera 20 Agent Guernsey's grand jury testimony. January 24, 2011, RT at 38:7-14. Mr.
 21 Miller now acknowledges in his declaration to the prosecution's Supplemental 28 33-35. This Supplemental Reply focuses only on the new information in Mr.

 Miller's declaration regarding his "mistakes" in producing the Guernsey transcripts.

1 Opposition filed September 5, 2011, that in response to this order on January 27, 2 2011, he only filed two of the four grand jury sessions. Declaration of Douglas M.
 3 Miller (“Miller Decl.”), September 5, 2011 (Docket Entry 642) at ¶ 5. He now 4 claims that when he filed the two sessions, he failed to recall the appearances on 5 September 15 and October 14. Id.

6 On March 25, 2011, Mr. Miller was again ordered to provide Agent 7 Guernsey’s grand jury testimony to the Court in camera. March 25, 2011, RT at 8 112:14-16. In complying with that order, Mr. Miller “realized” he had not 9 provided the September 15, 2010 transcript to the Court as previously ordered on 10 January 24, 2011. Miller Decl. at ¶ 7. So, in March 2011, Mr. Miller filed with the 11 Court three sessions of the Guernsey grand jury testimony, seemingly without an 12 acknowledgment of his earlier, incomplete filing.

13 In March 2011, when he “realized” his January production of grand jury 14 testimony had been incomplete, Mr. Miller had good reason to carefully look for 15 all of the Guernsey grand jury testimony (and for all discovery). Clearly, his 16 failure to comply with the January Court order should have been a “wake up” call.
 17 Indeed, Mr. Miller assured the Court time and time again that he and his team had 18 complied with the Court’s discovery orders, that “top to bottom” reviews for 19 discoverable evidence had been made, and that the prosecution’s compliance had 20 been complete. See, e.g., December 14, 2010, RT at 41:22-24, 42:19 – 43:2; April

9 III. THE PROSECUTION'S INTENTIONAL SHIELDING OF ITS

10 INVESTIGATION FROM SCRUTINY IS PART OF ITS

11 CONTINUING PATTERN OF MISCONDUCT

12     A. The Prosecution Used Agent Costley To Shield Its Investigation

13       Agent Costley testified as a purported "summary witness." This enabled the 14 prosecutors to present a summary witness who had no knowledge about the 15 investigation or the facts, except for what the prosecution team deliberately "spoon 16 fed" him. That way, the summary witness was able to provide the testimony the 17 prosecution needed while the prosecution could continue to shield its investigation 18 by presenting a witness immune to meaningful cross-examination. The 19 prosecution admitted that it wanted to put its actions and its investigation "off-20 limits." April 15, 2011, RT at 1697:19 – 1698:10. And it worked. Agent 21 Costley's testimony as the summary witness most certainly kept the defense from 22 meaningful inquiry into the investigation.

23       A motion to exclude Agent Costley's testimony was filed pre-trial. See 24 Motion in Limine to Exclude Testimony of Special Agent Dane Costley as a 25 Summary Witness, March 28, 2011 (Docket Entry 365); Reply to the 26 Government's Opposition to Defendants' Motion in Limine to Exclude Testimony 27 of Special Agent Dane Costley as a Summary Witness, March 31, 2011 (Docket 28 Entry 378). The prosecution represented that "Agent Costley's summary

1 testimony would be highly useful because it would permit the efficient presentation 2 of large amounts of data,” and without him, “the government would be forced to 3 needlessly walk the jury through large amounts of detailed documents . . . resulting 4 in a trial that [would] be considerably longer than previously estimated.”
 5 Government’s Response to Defendants’ Motion to Exclude Summary Testimony
 6 by Special Agent Dane Costley, March 29, 2011 (Docket Entry 368) at p. 3 7 (emphasis added). Based on the prosecution’s representations, the Court ruled that 8 Agent Costley could testify. April 20, 2011, RT at 2103:11-13.

9       But the prosecution never revealed to the Court and defendants how clueless 10 Agent Costley was about this matter. It was only during cross-examination that it 11 became clear he was unqualified as a witness.<sup>14</sup> See Fed. R. Evid. 602. The 12 prosecution intentionally misled the defendants and the Court about the extent of 13 Agent Costley’s knowledge and ability to serve as a summary witness.<sup>15</sup>

14       B. Contrary To The Prosecution’s Representations, Agent Costley
 15                   Was Not A Proper “Summary Witness”

16       The Supplemental Brief details Agent Costley’s lack of relevant knowledge 17 and his lack of the qualifications to be a “summary witness.” Supp. Brief at pp.
 18 39-42.<sup>16</sup>

19 20       <sup>14</sup> The prosecution is apparently of two minds regarding Agent Costley. In 21 conflicting statements in its brief, the prosecution argues that it did not select its 22 witnesses “to shield [the] investigation.” Supp. Opp. at p. 53; see also p. 67, n. 73.

 23 But on the very next page, it admits that it selected its witnesses “to limit the 24 defendants’ ability to cross-examine the agents about the propriety of the 25 investigation.” Supp. Opp. at p. 54. And it acknowledged as much to the Court.
See Supp. Brief at p. 38, n. 1.

26       <sup>15</sup> The prosecution ignores how startling Agent Costley’s lack of knowledge 27 was to the Court, never addressing this Court’s pointed comments about Costley 28 and the charts he introduced. See Supp. Brief at p. 23.

29       <sup>16</sup> The prosecution argues that the Court was mistaken in its June 27th 30 statement that the prosecutors had “played games with the inclusion or absence of
 31 REPLY TO GOVERNMENT’S OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS’ SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF
 32 IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT

1           In response, the prosecution argues that Agent Costley “did have some 2 involvement in the investigation: as a member of the FBI squad that investigated 3 this case, he took part in the search of LMC’s offices in 2008, and on occasion, he 4 would discuss the case with one of the lead agents.” Supp. Opp. at p. 31 (emphasis 5 in original). Of course, this argument is belied by Agent Costley’s own testimony.

6           Agent Costley testified he was one of more than 20 agents at the November 7 20, 2008 search, and that he had nothing to do with the investigation. April 29, 8 2011, RT at 3207:2-10. He was just a “body” securing the premises and items.
 9 April 29, 2011, RT at 3207:11-16. He was assigned to secure a warehouse 10 building, which did not contain a lot of documents. April 29, 2011, RT at 3208:4-11 10.

12           Moreover, his casual conversations with his fellow squad member, Agent 13 Binder, were of such little importance, he could not recall them. April 29, 2011, 14 RT at 3210:9 – 3211:1. And he acknowledged having no role in the matter until 15 February 2011, when his squad leader asked for a volunteer, he raised his hand to 16 volunteer to be the “summary witness.” April 29, 2011, RT at 3212:4-13.

17
 19
 20 Mr. Costley on the witness list.” See Supp. Opp. at p. 29 (internal quotations 21 omitted). It based this argument on its claim that the March 11, 2011 Joint 22 Submission (Docket Entry 262), in response to this Court’s March 9, 2011 minute 23 order, was not a “witness list” but instead a request from the Court to list those 24 individuals and entities related to the pending pretrial motions. See Supp. Opp. at 25 p. 29. It argues that, because Agent Costley was not involved in those motions, the 26 prosecution failed to include him on the March 11 joint submission. See Supp.
 27 Opp. at p. 30. However, the Court’s March 9, 2011 order is very clear – it required 28 the parties to “prepare a chart or table listing . . . all entities and individuals referred to in the motion papers . . . as well as prosecution experts and law enforcement agents who may testify at trial.” Docket Entry 248 at p. 1 (emphasis added).

1       The question here is simple: can a witness who knows nothing testify as a 2 “summary” witness? Agent Costley clearly did not testify on the basis of 3 knowledge gained as a result of his involvement in the investigation.<sup>17</sup>

4       Agent Costley’s role as a summary witness was improper, and the 5 prosecution knew that when it misled the Court about the nature of his proposed 6 testimony. The “summary agent” cases on which the prosecution now relies do not 7 support its position. Not one of those cases involved a “summary agent” with 8 anywhere near Agent Costley’s lack of knowledge.<sup>18</sup>

9       Instead, as the cases cited by the prosecution note, summary witnesses are 10 case agents (see, e.g., United States v. Dukagjini, 326 F.3d 45, 51 (2d Cir. 2003); 11 United States v. Olano, 62 F.3d 1180, 1203 (9th Cir. 1995)); agents who have 12 studied all the pertinent documents and testimony (see, e.g., United States v. Bray, 13 139 F.3d 1104, 1107 (6th Cir. 1998); United States v. Nivica, 887 F.2d 1110, 1125 14 (1st Cir. 1989); United States v. Behrens, 689 F.2d 154, 161 (10th Cir. 1982)); or 15 agents qualified as experts (see, e.g., United States v. Freeman, 498 F.3d 893, 902-16 04 (9th Cir. 2007); Dukagjini, 326 F.3d at 51).

17       The prosecution also attempts to justify this deprivation of the defendants’ 18 constitutional right to confront and cross-examine witnesses, first by trying to 19 distinguish the compelling case of Bullcoming v. New Mexico, 131 S.Ct. 2705

21       <sup>17</sup> Agent Costley did not testify as an expert witness. In addition, Agent 22 Costley was present at trial only for his own testimony.

23       <sup>18</sup> The prosecution cites several cases in support of the argument that a 24 summary witness does not have to exclusively create or prepare the summary 25 exhibits, and that merely supervising the creation of the charts is sufficient. But 26 that did not happen in this case. Unlike the agents in United States v. Moon, 513 27 F.3d 527, 546 (6th Cir. 2008), and United States v. Scales, 594 F.2d 558, 563 (6th 28 Cir. 1979), Costley did not supervise the creation of the summary exhibits he was called to introduce. Furthermore, unlike the testifying agents in United States v. Bray, 139 F.3d 1104, 1107-08, 1112 (6th Cir. 1998), and United States v. Behrens, 689 F.2d 154, 161 (10th Cir. 1982), Costley did not exclusively prepare the charts.

1 (2011), and second, by claiming that, because Agent Costley was subject to cross-2 examination, there was no problem. Supp. Opp. at pp. 33-35. But Bullcoming and 3 the body of Confrontation Clause jurisprudence on which it is based compel a 4 contrary conclusion.<sup>19</sup>

5 In Bullcoming, the Supreme Court held that the Confrontation Clause was 6 violated, when a report prepared by one analyst was introduced by another 7 analyst. Here, the charts purportedly summarizing a body of evidence were 8 apparently prepared by unidentified members of the prosecution team, but were 9 introduced by Agent Costley. He was unable to tell the jury who had prepared the 10 charts, nor was he able to testify about the manner and method used to prepare 11 them. In addition, Agent Costley was unable to testify about the body of evidence 12 and data upon which the charts had purportedly been prepared, since he was not 13 familiar with it. Thus, he could not be cross-examined about them.

14 The prosecution's claim that Agent Costley could be cross-examined (Supp.
 15 Opp. at pp. 33-35) places form over substance.<sup>20</sup> See, e.g., Fed. R. Evid. 602 ("A

17<sup>19</sup> The prosecution tries to distinguish Bullcoming by citing to Lester v. United

18 States, ___ A.3d ___, 2011 WL 3190469 (D.C. July 28, 2011). In fact, Lester
 19 supports the defense. In Lester, the prosecution introduced "a certificate attesting 20 that Lester did not have a license to carry a pistol . . ." Id. at *1. This certificate 21 was based on a computer record search. The detective who requested the search 22 testified. Id. He was present with the clerk when the computer record was 23 searched; he directed the computer search by stating what he wanted; he saw the 24 computer result from where he was standing; he was present when the certificate 25 was prepared. Id. In distinguishing Bullcoming, the Lester court noted that 26 Bullcoming held that the Confrontation Clause was not violated when the testifying 27 officer actually directed and observed the test being conducted, as in Lester. Id. at 28 *5 n.2. Here, of course, Costley did not see the charts prepared or direct their preparation. He did not select the underlying data or even review it. He did not independently review other underlying documents. He did not even know who prepared the charts. Lester is further support for the defense.

20 If the prosecution's argument prevails, henceforth all evidence may be 21 admitted by non-percipient testifying witnesses based on what someone told them

 3 Labor Relations Bd. v. First Termite Control Co., Inc., 646 F.2d 424, 427-28 (9th
 4 Cir. 1981) (purported custodian of records' insufficient personal knowledge 5 concerning record keeping rendered cross-examination meaningless; document 6 could not be admitted under business records hearsay exception without proper 7 testimony from custodian of record with knowledge). Cf. United States v. Baker, 8 10 F.3d 1374, 1411-12 (9th Cir. 1993), overruled on other grounds by United 9 States v. Nordby, 225 F.3d 1053, 1059 (9th Cir. 2000) (agent who prepared chart 11 summaries, her alleged selectivity, and her partiality"); United States v. Meyers, 12 847 F.2d 1408, 1412 (9th Cir. 1988) (summary chart of phone calls and events 13 observed by a surveillance team admissible where cross-examination of two agents 14 who were "central participants on the . . . team" allowed defense to alert jury to 15 any discrepancies in chart) (emphasis added).

16 The prosecution's attempts to equate what Agent Costley did to cases where 17 the summary agent was central to or intimately involved in supervising the 18 investigation and the preparation of charts are as misguided as Agent Costley was 19 as a witness.

20       C.     The Prosecution's Shielding Of Its Investigation Through Agent
 21       Costley Was Prejudicial

22 The prosecution attempts to escape the consequences of its pattern of 23 misconduct, a pattern that included hiding its investigation from scrutiny and 24 presenting an unqualified witness, by claiming its misconduct did not prejudice the 27 was the chance to ask the non-percipient witness questions, however meaningless 28 the responses, there would be no Sixth Amendment violation.

1 defense.<sup>21</sup> In so arguing, the prosecution claims, erroneously, that there was ample 2 opportunity to cross-examine Agent Costley, and so the prosecution’s misconduct
 3 caused no harm. In support, it cites to statements this Court made before Costley 4 testified, and before it was clear Costley could not, because of a lack of knowledge, 5 be meaningfully cross-examined. Supp. Opp. at pp. 33-36.

6 The prosecution also claims that its misconduct caused no prejudice, because 7 the defense could and did use the charts that were admitted through Agent Costley.
 8 Just because the defense sought to ameliorate the impact of the prosecution’s 9 misconduct does not mean there was no impact on the defendants from the 10 misconduct. Nor does it mean there should be no consequences to the prosecution 11 for its misconduct. And the intentional deprivation of the ability to pursue 12 legitimate lines of inquiry by the defense – by using Agent Costley instead of one 13 of its case agents and selecting witnesses so as to deny the production of Brady 14 materials – is misconduct.

15 D. The Prosecution’s Shielding Of Its Investigation Violated Brady, 16 Kyles And Their Progeny

17 The prosecution argues that its decision to “forestall an improper attack on 18 [their] investigation” was permissible and a matter of trial strategy. Supp. Opp. at 19 p. 57 (emphasis in original). This argument exemplifies the prosecution’s 20 fundamental misunderstanding of its obligations under Brady and the meaning of 21 Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S. 419 (1995). Here, as in Kyles, the prosecution 22 purposely withheld Brady material that would have permitted the defense to raise 23 legitimate questions about the investigation.

 25
 26 <sup>21</sup> Bullcoming notes: “[T]he [Confrontation] Clause does not tolerate 27 dispensing with confrontation simply because the court believes that questioning 28 one witness about another’s testimonial statements provides a fair enough opportunity for cross-examination.” 131 S.Ct. at 2716. (emphasis added).

To excuse its conduct, the prosecution erroneously attempts to limit Kyles to only two situations: “(1) ‘[w]hen . . . the probative force of evidence depends on the circumstances in which it was obtained,’ or (2) when ‘the thoroughness and even the good faith of the investigation’ is lacking in that the investigators failed to ‘even consider’ information indicating that the defendant is innocent.” Supp. Opp. at pp. 56-57. However, cases following Kyles, such as United States v. Sager, 227 F.3d 1138 (9th Cir. 2000), confirm that the holding in Kyles is broader than that.

The prosecution unsuccessfully tries to distinguish United States v. Sager. Supp. Opp. at p. 58, n. 66. In Sager, the Ninth Circuit found that the district court improperly barred the jury from considering the “quality of the investigation.” 227 F.3d at 1145. Sager held that details of the investigatory process potentially affected the credibility of the prosecution’s investigator and were properly part of a defense. Id. Thus, the prosecution’s intentional withholding of Brady materials limited inquiry into its investigation and the credibility of its agents, a line of inquiry permitted by Kyles.<sup>22</sup> See also United States v. Quinn, 537 F. Supp. 2d 99, 114-16 (D.D.C. 2008) (finding Brady violation and prejudice from failure to disclose to defense false information obtained from a key witness; information would have allowed defense to attack the credibility of a testifying agent who relied on the information; agent’s credibility could have been impugned by revealing his “investment in the case and his motivation to have a successful prosecution” despite investigatory errors and by allowing defense theme and <sup>22</sup> The prosecution also cites United States v. Carona, 630 F.3d 917 (9th Cir. 2011), which upheld the district court’s decision to prevent the defendant from introducing evidence of the lead prosecutor’s misconduct. But in Carona, the evidence excluded was an ethical violation by the prosecutors of the “no-contact” rule (contained in the California Rules of Professional Conduct), not evidence of investigative failures or factual issues. Id. at 919-20. The Ninth Circuit found that such a violation did not have any bearing on the credibility of any witness at trial. Id. at 924.

1 strategy “attacking the integrity of the government’s investigation” pursuant to 2 Kyles) (emphasis added); United States v. Howell, 231 F.3d 615, 625-26 (9th Cir.
 3 2000) (even if evidence seems inculpatory, it must be disclosed under Kyles, if it 4 shows a “flawed police investigation;” finding Brady violation for failure to 5 disclose errors in police reports, though affirming conviction because, unlike here, 6 no prejudice shown).

7 The other cases cited by the prosecution are also inapposite. See, e.g., 8 United States v. Waters, 627 F.3d 345, 352-53 (9th Cir. 2010) (affirming decision 9 limiting defendant’s argument that “she was the victim of government misconduct 10 or a conspiracy to conceal exculpatory evidence,” since the evidence of such a 11 conspiracy was limited only to a discrepancy between an FBI 302 report and the 12 agent notes for that interview, and little would be gained “in encouraging the jury 13 to speculate based upon such a small omission.”); United States v. Regan, 103 F.3d 14 1072, 1081-82 (2d Cir. 1997) (affirming the district court’s ruling in a perjury 15 prosecution that the defendant police officer was barred from presenting evidence 16 that his lies before the grand jury were not “material,” because the government 17 staged the investigation in order to elicit his lies; Kyles not cited); see also Jones v.
 18 Basinger, 635 F.3d 1030, 1045 (7th Cir. 2011) (issue was whether the “course of 19 investigation” hearsay exception was applicable when prosecution offered 20 statement); United States v. Johnson, 529 F.3d 493, 501 (2d Cir. 2008) (same); 21 United States v. Reyes, 18 F.3d 65, 70-71 (2d Cir. 1994) (same).

22 The prosecution also, without basis, tries to limit Kyles only to cases just like 23 Bowen v. Maynard, 799 F.2d 593 (10th Cir. 1986), a case cited in Kyles. In 24 Bowen, the prosecution violated Brady by suppressing evidence of an alternative 25 suspect. Id. at 610-14. The prosecution suggests that Kyles is limited to the exact 26 type of Brady violation that occurred in Bowen. Supp. Opp. at p. 57, n. 65.
 27 However, as Kyles and its progeny make clear, the defense can question the 28

1 prosecution's investigation beyond instances involving evidence of alternative 2 suspects. See Sager, 227 F.3d at 1145.<sup>23</sup>

21
 22<sup>23</sup> The other cases cited by the prosecution in its attempt to limit the application 23 of Kyles to Brady violations concerning undisclosed information about possible 24 alternative suspects are similarly inapposite. See Supp. Opp. at p. 57, n. 65 (citing 25 Kiley v. United States, 260 F. Supp. 2d 248, 268-74 (D. Mass. 2003) (denying the 28 Supp. 2d. 260, 326-29 (W.D. Pa. 2002) (denying the defendant's Brady claims because the withheld evidence of an alternative suspect did little to undermine the strong evidence introduced against the defendant at trial)).

1 by trial witness Alma Patricia Cerdan Saavedra. See Supp. Opp. at p. 21.<sup>24</sup>
 2 According to the prosecution, “[Ms.] Cerdan confirmed that LaMarche had sued 3 Enrique Aguilar and that in retaliation for that suit Aguilar, ‘had [LaMarche] put in 4 jail for almost a month.’” Supp. Opp. at p. 21. The prosecution cites to a 5 December 8, 2010 “302 of Ms. Cerdan.” Id. (citing Exhibit 7).

6 In fact, the “302” does not say that. It says that Mr. LaMarche sued Aguilar.
 7 It also says, “Aguilar had him put in jail.” But it does not say that the jailing was 8 in retaliation for the lawsuit, nor does it say whether the jailing was justified and 9 for cause. And while the prosecution had information-sharing with Mexican law 10 enforcement officials in this case, see, e.g., April 26, 2011, RT at 2783:13 – 2784:1 11 (joint efforts in Mexico to seize the Dream Seeker yacht), there is no evidence that 12 the prosecution ever bothered to confirm statements made by Mr. LaMarche on the 13 danger issue.<sup>25</sup>

14       B.     The Prosecution Has Not Sufficiently Addressed Its Interference
 15                    With Witnesses

16       Jean Guy LaMarche told the defense investigator not to contact him 17 anymore, because an agent expressed that he/she was furious with him for talking 18 to the defense. In response, the prosecution claims:

 20 21       <sup>24</sup> Relying on Ms. Cerdan here is at odds with the prosecutors’ claim in its 22 Supplemental Opposition that Ms. Cerdan was “only relevant to the case against 23 Angela Aguilar.” See Supp. Opp. at p. 8, n. 6. And it never adduced this evidence 24 at trial, despite that it specifically called Ms. Cerdan to testify about Mr. LaMarche 25 and his relationship with Aguilar. April 14, 2011, RT at 1686:10 – 1687:25.

26       <sup>25</sup> Of course, as pleadings submitted by the defense show, Mr. LaMarche has a 27 history of prevarication and stealing from employers. See Supplemental 28 Submission of Facts re Jean Guy LaMarche and Related Correspondence, April 14, 2011 (Docket Entry 450). Nothing corroborates Jean Guy LaMarche’s claimed safety concerns.

- 1           1)     that Mr. LaMarche is lying, since its agents aver (in identical 2 language) that they never expressed “fury or anger” toward him;<sup>26</sup> 3           2)     that because Mr. LaMarche talked to the defense investigator once 4 before, it could not be true that the agents, after finding that out, were furious with 5 Mr. LaMarche; and 6           3)     the defense did not mention this interference with witnesses in their 7 May 9, 2011 pleading (a pleading that largely dealt with the false and misleading 8 Guernsey grand jury testimony and the prosecutors’ role in presenting that 9 testimony), so it must not be true.

10          These arguments do not address the issue. While the agents – in identical 11 language – state they never expressed “fury or anger,” they do not state what in 12 fact they, or any of them, did say to Mr. LaMarche. In particular, the agent’s 13 declarations do not state what they said to him about speaking with the defense.
 14 Instead, they completely avoid the issue. And nothing is submitted from Mr.
 15 LaMarche.

 17
 18 19       <sup>26</sup> See Declaration of Olivier N. Farache, September 5, 2011 at ¶ 3 (“During 20 my contacts with LaMarche, I never expressed ‘fury’ or anger towards him.”); 21 Declaration of Farrell Binder, September 5, 2011 at ¶ 3 (“During my contacts with 22 LaMarche, I never expressed ‘fury’ or anger towards him.”); Declaration of Carlos 23 Narro, September 5, 2011 at ¶ 7 (“During my contacts with LaMarche, I never 24 expressed ‘fury’ or anger towards him.”); Declaration of Susan Guernsey, 25 September 5, 2011 at ¶ 3 (“I never expressed ‘fury’ or anger towards him.”).
 26 Significantly, of the four agents who provided declarations, three are known to have previously provided false statements under oath in connection with the investigation of Lindsey Manufacturing Company, Keith E. Lindsey, and Steve K.
 Lee.

27          Neither agents Guernsey nor Binder allegedly had any contact with Mr.
 28 LaMarche after March 23, 2011, so their declarations are irrelevant anyway.

Nor does the prosecution's argument that Mr. LaMarche talked with the defense on March 23, 2011 excuse this subsequent conduct. The very point is that, as a result of this conduct, Mr. LaMarche refused to speak to the defense again. It is clear that the agents, or one of them, being furious with a witness can discourage a once-willing witness from subsequently talking to the defense. And not mentioning the issue in a pleading focused on different issues, namely, Agent Guernsey's prevarications and the prosecution's role in hiding them, is not relevant or meaningful.

C. The Prosecution Used The LaMarche Emails Substantively, Against All Defendants, In Violation Of The Court's Limiting Instructions

The prosecution argues that it did not commit misconduct in its use of the LaMarche emails<sup>27</sup> because:

- 1) the writings had been admitted into evidence;
- 2) the prosecution's paraphrase of the limiting instruction was fair; and
- 3) the prosecution's use of the LaMarche exhibits was in conformity with the instruction.

The prosecution is wrong on all three points.

While the challenged writings were admitted into evidence, the Court limited their use. Some were admitted for a limited purpose against Mr. Lee; none were admitted against the other defendants. A writing admitted for a limited purpose cannot be used for all purposes. Fed. R. Evid. 105. But, as set forth in <sup>27</sup> The prosecution also argues that the defense did not "contemporaneously object." But the defense did object, the objections were preserved, and the Court told the defense that it need not keep objecting. April 26, 2011, RT at 2810:18 – 2812:4.

1 defendants' Supplemental Brief and below, that is exactly what the prosecution 2 did.<sup>28</sup>

3       Contrary to the prosecution's claim, the Court never found that the 4 prosecution had fairly followed the limiting instruction. Instead, the Court found 5 that the prosecution had overreached in its use of the LaMarche emails in closing 6 argument. On pages 26-28 of the Supplemental Opposition, the prosecution 7 defends its use of the LaMarche emails and its lack of adherence to the limits 8 placed by the Court on the use of those exhibits by Court Instructions D and E.
 9 The prosecution claims that the Court specifically found that "the government's 10 paraphrasing of exhibit D was 'fair.'" Supp. Opp. at p. 27. The prosecution's brief 11 selectively quotes the Court:

12       The Court: Mr. Goldberg said something about Court Exhibit D . . . .
 13 He referred to the instruction that the jurors may not assume from the 14 exhibits that were specified in that exhibit that the facts and 15 statements they contain are necessarily true or accurate, and then he 16 said something to the effect . . . that, "But they could still find them to 17 be true." I think that's a fair paraphrase.

18 Supp. Opp. at p. 27 (citing May 6, 2011, RT at 4233:12-21) (emphasis in original).

19       In citing to this statement, the prosecution erroneously argues that the Court 20 found Mr. Goldberg's paraphrase of Exhibit D and argument were fair. What the 21 Court referred to as fair, and what Mr. Goldberg agreed was fair, was the Court's 22 paraphrase of what Mr. Goldberg said. The rest of the colloquy, omitted in the 23 prosecution's Supplemental Opposition, is as follows:

---

25       <sup>28</sup> Remarkably, notwithstanding the Court's rulings during trial, the 26 prosecution now argues that these documents admitted for a limited purpose could 27 be used by the jury against all defendants for all purposes. Supp. Opp. at p. 28, n.
 28 29. It also argues that Mr. Lee's statement to FBI agents is evidence against Dr.
 Lindsey. Id. at p. 71.

1                   Mr. Goldberg: That is right. I think I added based on all the evidence.

2                   The Court: Okay. It may not have been artfully written in this Court 3                   Exhibit D, but I would entertain a motion to supplement it with an 4                   instruction to the jury that they cannot find that the facts and 5                   statements are necessarily true or accurate based on just the contents 6                   of those exhibits.

7                   May 6, 2011, RT at 4233:22 – 4234:3 (emphasis in original).

8                   Contrary to the prosecution's current argument, the prosecution had clearly 9                   overstepped, and the Court so instructed the jury.

10                  Finally, the prosecution used the emails in a manner beyond what had been 11                  permitted by the Court. The LaMarche emails were displayed on a PowerPoint 12                  during the prosecution's closing without any suggestion of limited use. The 13                  prosecution's argument assumed the truth of the emails authored by Mr. LaMarche 14                  and so argued to the jury. See May 6, 2011, RT at 4097:18 – 4108:11. For 15                  example, in reference to Government Exhibit 959, which was subject to the 16                  limiting instruction in Court's Exhibit E and contained statements authored by Mr.
17                  LaMarche, Mr. Goldberg stated "These documents you can consider for the truth, 18                  standing by themselves." May 6, 2011, RT at 4106:13-14. Yet he failed to remind 19                  the jury that the statements from Mr. LaMarche could only be used as evidence of 20                  Mr. Lee's knowledge and intent.<sup>29</sup>

1       V. THE PROSECUTION WRONGLY ARGUED WILLFUL BLINDNESS

2           A. The Prosecution's Argument

3           In closing argument, the prosecution urged the jury to find the defendants 4 guilty on a willful blindness/deliberate ignorance theory. Mr. Goldberg went so far 5 as to say, “you can’t turn a blind eye,” and covered his eyes with his hands to 6 emphasize the argument. May 6, 2011, RT at 4154:1-12. The use of these 7 arguments and this gesture was the culmination of a series of rhetorical “how could 8 they not know” questions. Supp. Brief at pp. 51-52. This, despite the Court 9 unequivocally denying the prosecution’s proffered willful blindness/deliberate 10 ignorance instruction. May 5, 2011, RT at 3833:17-23.<sup>30</sup>

11          B. The Prosecution Conflates Willful Blindness/Deliberate Ignorance 12           With Constructive Knowledge To Justify Its Improper Jury
 13           Argument

14          The willful blindness/deliberate ignorance instruction proposed by the 15 prosecution and rejected by the Court stated that the jury could find a defendant 16 acted knowingly if the defendant:

17           1)       was aware of a high probability that all or a portion of the payment or 18 gift would be offered, given, or promised, directly or indirectly, to a foreign 19 official; and

20 21          Supp. Opp. at p. 22.

22          <sup>30</sup>       The prosecution tries to excuse its conduct by stating there was no “order” 23 prohibiting it from arguing “constructive knowledge.” As set forth below, the 24 prosecution conveniently conflates these two theories in its Supplemental 25 Opposition, so that it can argue it was permitted to present a willful 26 blindness/deliberate ignorance theory to the jury. But the Court rejected a willful 27 blindness instruction, saying it did not apply to any defendant. May 5, 2011, RT at 28 3833:17-23. Despite that, the prosecution argued the defendants could be convicted on a willful blindness theory. What type of “order” the prosecution needed to prevent it from arguing a theory of culpability not allowed by the Court is a mystery.

1           2) deliberately avoided knowing the truth.<sup>31</sup>

2           The instruction actually given by the Court included constructive knowledge 3 like the first prong of the instruction that the Court had rejected (awareness of a 4 high probability of the existence of some circumstance). Significantly, the 5 instruction given by the Court omitted the “deliberately avoided knowing the truth” 6 prong. The jury was not instructed on willful blindness.

7           Instead of acknowledging that key obvious difference, the prosecution again 8 seeks to conflate the two instructions<sup>32</sup> in its argument here. See Supp. Opp. at pp.

10          <sup>31</sup> The prosecution’s proposed instructions included both a willful blindness 11 instruction and an FCPA constructive knowledge instruction containing the “high 12 probability” language:

13           Proposed Instruction No. 28, p. 34, lines 14-17:

14           A person is deemed to have such knowledge if the 15 evidence shows that he was aware of a high probability 16 of the existence of such circumstance, unless he actually believes such that the circumstance does not exist.

17           Proposed Instruction No. 30, p. 39:

18           You may find that a defendant acted knowingly if you find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant

19           (1) was aware of a high probability that all or a portion of the payment or gift would be offered, given, or promised, directly or indirectly, to a foreign official, and 20           (2) deliberately avoided learning the truth.

21           You may not find such knowledge, however, if you find that the defendant actually believed that none of the payment or gift would be offered, given, or promised, directly or indirectly, to a foreign official, or if you find 22           that the defendant was simply careless.

23           Government’s Proposed Jury Instructions (Annotated), March 23, 2011 (Docket 24           Entry 319).

25          <sup>32</sup> Of course, if as the prosecution now claims the two instructions were the
IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT

1 37-41. But they are different, and the instruction given to the jury by the Court did 2 not include the deliberate ignorance/willful blindness prong.<sup>33</sup>

3       C.     The Willful Blindness Argument Was Designed To Convict The 4       Defendants On A Rejected Theory; It Caused The Exact
 5       Prejudice The Prosecution Intended

6       While acknowledging that it argued a willful blindness theory of culpability 7 to the jury, the prosecution now claims that its deliberate ignorance/willful 8 blindness argument did not prejudice the defendants. Supp. Opp. at p. 41. That 9 simply is not so. It was a terribly prejudicial argument, since it invited the jury to 10 find the element of knowledge and convict based on a theory of culpability that 11 was not supported by the evidence or justified. This argument is part of the 12 prosecution's pattern of misconduct; that pattern mandates dismissal.

 15      BE CONDONED

16       Prosecutor Nicola Mrazek has been assigned to matters related to ABB since 17 at least 2007. She is the lead prosecutor in United States v. Hozhabri, No. 07-CR-18 452 (S.D. Tx.), a case involving theft from ABB, United States v. ABB, Inc., No.
 19 10-CR-664 (S.D. Tx.), a case involving FCPA violations by ABB, United States v.

21 same, why did it proffer both instructions to the Court?

22       <sup>33</sup> The prosecution cites to United States v. Ramirez, 320 Fed. Appx. 7, 2009
 23 WL 909645 (2d Cir. 2009), to claim it could argue actual knowledge and willful 24 blindness/deliberate ignorance in the alternative to the jury. Supp. Opp. at pp. 38-25 39. In Ramirez, arguing actual knowledge and conscious avoidance in the 26 alternative was proper, because the evidence supported both theories of culpability.
 2009 WL 909645 at *3. Moreover, the court in Ramirez gave a deliberate 27 ignorance willful blindness instruction to the jury. Id. at *1-3. That was not the 28 case here, where the Court refused an instruction on deliberate ignorance, because the evidence failed to support one. May 5, 2011, RT at 3833: 17-23.

1      Basurto, No. 09-CR-325 (S.D. Tx.), a case involving FCPA violations by Mr.
 2      Basurto related to ABB, and United States v. O'Shea, No. 09-CR-629 (S.D. Tx.), a 3      case involving FCPA violations by Mr. O'Shea related to ABB. She has acted as 4      co-lead prosecutor in the Lindsey-Lee matter since before the 2008 issuance of 5      search warrants. Ms. Mrazek is a ubiquitous presence in each case with a complete 6      body of knowledge in all of these cases.

7           One of the charts admitted through Agent Costley, Government Exhibit 30, 8      (see Exhibit A), represents that money was paid by LMC to Grupo to Sorvill, and 9      was eventually used to make payments to a military school for Nestor Moreno's 10     son. As the Supplemental Brief sets forth, that exact payment – attributed to LMC 11     in the instant case – is attributed to ABB as a payment in United States v. O'Shea.

12        In its Supplemental Opposition, the prosecution does not deny it attributed 13     the same payment for military school expenses to both LMC and ABB. Instead, 14     the prosecution seeks to ignore and obfuscate the issue, by arguing that the defense 15     has no right to the O'Shea secret grand jury material. Supp. Opp. at pp. 48-49.
 16     The argument is both wrong and irrelevant.

17        The O'Shea indictment alleges, as an overt act, the military school payment 18     that the prosecution sought to attribute to the defendants here. See Supp. Brief, 19     Exhibit F, p. 20 (overt act 16(o) of O'Shea indictment). The O'Shea indictment is 20     not sealed. And all of the grand jury testimony and other information that supports 21     that portion of the O'Shea indictment should have been (and still could be) 22     produced to the defendants here as Brady.

23        The prosecution's suggestion that it did not claim LMC made the military 24     school payment is belied by Government Exhibit 30 (the summary "flowchart").
 25     Indeed, to justify the admission of the supporting military school payment exhibits, 26     Ms. Mrazek highlighted Exhibit 30 and the "money trail" to support the "overall 27     theory that everything that Lindsey paid to Grupo, beginning with the creation of 28     their relationship, or at least a big chunk of it, went to Moreno." See April 27,
 REPLY TO GOVERNMENT'S OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF
 IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT

1 2011, RT at 2852:1 – 2854:15; see also April 27, 2011, RT at 2848:16 – 2858:25
 2 (Ms. Mrazek argued that there was a clear linkage between the military school 3 payments and LMC). This theory is belied by the O'Shea indictment. At no time 4 did Ms. Mrazek reveal that she (herself) was attributing the same illicit payment to 5 ABB in another case where she was lead counsel. April 7, 2011, RT at 733:11 – 6 735:3.

7 In short, an illegal payment was attributed to LMC in this case. What could 8 be more exculpatory than evidence showing that someone else was responsible for 9 the payment.

10 VII. THE WITNESS LIST, DISCOVERY AND OTHER ACTS OF 11 MISCONDUCT

12 A. The Prosecution's Actions Related To Its Witness Lists Are Part 13 Of The Course Of Misconduct Infecting This Case

14 The prosecution again downplays its gamesmanship with its witness lists.
 15 The issue is not that the prosecution called a “relatively small subset” of the 16 individuals on its witness lists, but that it purposely failed to provide the 17 defendants with a realistic list of witnesses, in order to hamper the defense efforts 18 to prepare for trial.

19 CFE official Abel Huitron is the perfect example. The prosecution knew it 20 could not present him as a trial witness (a fact they concealed until trial), but they 21 included him on witness lists anyway. April 7, 2011, RT at 742:8-14; Supp. Opp.
 22 at p. 19.

23 The prosecution also claims that it was over-inclusive in the names read to 24 the prospective jurors on March 30, 2011, including Jean Guy LaMarche, even 25 though it knew he was not testifying, in order “to determine if jurors might know 26 either a potential witness or someone whose name might be frequently mentioned 27 during the trial.” See Supp. Opp. at p. 24, n. 25. This is clearly an “after-the-fact” justification. Non-witnesses were not to be included in this witness list, and given what the prosecution knew, Jean Guy LaMarche should not have been included.

B. The Prosecution Failed To Comply With Its Obligations Under
Brady And This Court’s Discovery Orders

1. CFE, Rowan and Basurto Interview Reports

6        While the prosecution argues that it did not “delay” the production of the 7 IRS memorandum concerning the February 10, 2011 meeting with CFE officials, it 8 is inconceivable that the four-week plus period between the interview and the 9 production of the memorandum about a week before trial can be characterized as 10 anything but a delay. See Supp. Opp. at pp. 45-46. And if the prosecution took its 11 discovery obligations as seriously as it repeatedly stated it did, it would have 12 known that it had failed to produce the Rowan and Basurto interview reports much 13 earlier than the day before the defense began presenting its case. See Supp. Opp. at 14 pp. 47-48.

2. Garza, Serocki and Zavaleta

With respect to Laura Garza’s notary book, the prosecution seeks to excuse its misconduct by noting that Ms. Garza was “aggressively cross-examined.” Even if she was “aggressively cross-examined” as the prosecution states, Ms. Garza’s answers are clear: she showed the agents and a prosecutor her incomplete notary book on September 23, 2010. Significantly, these members of the prosecution team did not take custody of her notary book or even request a copy of it. Instead, they let Ms. Garza keep it. April 14, 2011, RT at 1526:6-18. When Ms. Garza traveled to Los Angeles for trial testimony over six months later, she provided the prosecution team with her notary book. At that point, the missing entries had been added to the book by Ms. Garza. April 14, 2011, RT at 1531:5-13. Yet the prosecution did not disclose this information to the defense until well into trial, just before Ms. Garza testified. April 14, 2011, RT at 1528:18 – 1532:15.

1        As for the issues related to Richard Serocki and Jose Zavaleta, if the 2 prosecution had been forthright in all its discovery obligations related to these two 3 individuals, the Court would not have ordered “an utterly new top to bottom” 4 review of all discovery to which the defendants were entitled immediately after the 5 cross-examination of Mr. Zavaleta.

6        C. The Prosecution’s Actions Related To The Footers Are Part Of 7        And Exemplify The Course Of Misconduct

8        The prosecution attempts to excuse its insertion of footers in a visual 9 demonstration used during Agent Costley’s testimony, by describing the footers as 10 “innocuous.” Supp. Opp. at p. 36, n. 39. The footers, which appeared on each 11 slide, were the prosecution’s descriptive categorization of items of evidence, such 12 as “the tip.” As inappropriate as the inclusion of the footers was, the prosecution’s 13 response to the objection to the footers at trial was more egregious misconduct.

14        In response to a defense objection to the footers, a prosecutor told the Court 15 that the footers were just a “banner” that was part of the “Sanction” program.
 16 April 27, 2011, RT at 2891:25 – 2892:2. The second time an objection was made, 17 the prosecutor claimed the footers could not be removed. April 27, 2011, RT at 18 2969:7 – 2970:15. Since the prosecutors had inserted the information into the 19 exhibit footers, they could have removed it as well.

20        And the prosecution’s defense of the footers – there was no problem with 21 them, because the Court did not initially notice them – is hardly a defense to 22 misleading the Court about the origin of the footers and including them in its 23 presentation to the jury.

24        D. Other Misconduct By The Prosecution

25        The prosecution gives short shrift to a variety of other, less dramatic, yet no 26 less important, instances of misconduct. Regarding the prosecution obtaining 27 Angela Aguilar’s prison emails without authorization, the Court suggested 28 addressing this issue at the June 27th hearing. In response, the prosecution
 IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT

1 provides another non-answer: it merely states this allegation has no relevance, 2 because Angela Aguilar is not a party to the present dispute. While Ms. Aguilar 3 may be back home in Mexico, her absence does not absolve the prosecution of its 4 pattern of misconduct in this case.

5       The Court also suggested that the post-June 27 briefing should address the 6 warrantless search of two LMC buildings. The defense did so and cited to the 7 prior suppression motions regarding those warrantless searches. The prosecution 8 inexplicably now argues that the defendants conceded that the prosecution 9 obtained lawful consent to search those two buildings. As set forth herein, that is 10 just not so. See supra at n. 4.

11           VIII. THE CUMULATIVE IMPACT OF THE PROSECUTION'S 12            MISCONDUCT REQUIRES DISMISSAL

13       The prosecution urges the Court to consider each of the numerous instances 14 of misconduct identified by the defense in isolation. This approach minimizes the 15 cumulative impact of its misconduct, and is inconsistent with controlling Ninth 16 Circuit law, which requires the Court to "review each instance of non-disclosure or 17 prosecutorial misconduct . . . collectively in light of the entire record." Hein v.
 18 Sullivan, 601 F.3d 897, 905 n.4 (9th Cir. 2010). When the record is examined as a 19 whole, it is evident that the prosecution engaged in a sustained pattern of 20 misconduct designed to win the case, not abide by the constitutional guarantee of a 21 fair trial.

22           A. The Prosecution Seeks To Ignore Its Pattern Of Misconduct

23       Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the Indictment, filed May 9, 2011, Reply 24 Brief, filed June 17, 2011, and Supplemental Brief in Support of Their Motion to 25 Dismiss the Indictment, filed July 25, 2011, establish that the prosecution engaged 26 in a repeated course of misconduct. As discussed in this Supplemental Reply 27 Brief, the prosecution's misconduct included, but was not limited to: (1) the 28 presentation of Special Agent Guernsey's false and misleading testimony to the 1 grand jury; (2) purposefully revealing only a small fraction of this testimony in 2 conjunction with Keith Lindsey's Miranda hearing; (3) further concealing that 3 testimony from the defense until jeopardy had attached; (4) inserting false 4 statements into the affidavits of federal agents for searches and seizures, and then 5 concealing that misconduct until the Franks hearing; (5) purposefully misleading 6 the Court with respect to the insertion of language, designed to circumvent 7 Tamura, into the affidavit for the search of ESI; (6) withholding certain 8 discoverable witness statements until the conclusion of the prosecution's case-in-9 chief and, in some other cases, until after trial; and (7) misrepresentations and 10 misuse of evidence and witnesses during all phases of the trial. See supra pp. at 1-11 36.

12 Defendants' Motion to Dismiss (Docket Entry 505) and Reply Brief (Docket 13 Entry 614) set forth the standards to be met for dismissal with prejudice and 14 establish that the prosecution's misconduct meets those standards. Defendants' 15 Supplemental Brief (Docket Entry 632) addresses the full scope of the 16 prosecution's misconduct (at least that which is now known to the defense), from 17 the outset of the investigation, through trial and continuing after trial, and 18 establishes that this course of misconduct infected every phase of this case. This 19 pattern of misconduct requires dismissal.

20 In its Supplemental Opposition, the prosecution continues to argue that 21 dismissal is inappropriate. Notably, the prosecution still does not accept 22 responsibility for the numerous instances of misconduct. Instead, it argues that no 23 misconduct occurred or, if it did, that no prejudice has been shown, cumulative or 24 otherwise. Finally, the prosecution again claims the jury's guilty verdict cured 25 any misconduct related to Agent Guernsey's false and misleading grand jury 26 testimony.<sup>34</sup>

27 28 <sup>34</sup> Even though the law remains the same, the prosecution's position on the
 IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT

1       The prosecution's premise, which is wrong, is that it made just one 2 "innocent mistake" – failing to produce the October 14, 2010 Guernsey grand jury 3 testimony. According to the prosecution, all other acts it committed – from 4 inserting false facts into multiple search and seizure warrants to using false and 5 misleading testimony to get the indictment, to explaining that the Tamura violation 6 was just "clumsy language" that "no one caught," to misleading the Court about 7 the nature of Special Agent Costley's testimony, to arguing culpability based on 8 willful blindness despite the Court's statement that this was not a willful blindness 9 case and its refusal to give a willful blindness instruction, to the misuse of the consequences of the presentation and use of false and misleading testimony at the 13 grand jury has changed from its June 6, 2011 Opposition. Docket Entry 600. The 14 prosecution's original Opposition acknowledged that United States v. Basurto, 497 15 F.2d 781 (9th Cir. 1974), is the controlling authority and that Basurto mandates 16 dismissal when an indictment is secured by material, perjurious testimony, 17 notwithstanding a subsequent conviction. See Opp. at pp. 2-4. The Supplemental 18 Opposition now urges the Court to disregard that binding Ninth Circuit precedent, 19 instead citing to cases in other circuits (see Supp. Opp. at p. 78, n. 89). The 20 government also misconstrues the holding in United States v. Sitton, 968 F.2d 947, 21 953-54 (9th Cir. 1992), abrogated on other grounds as recognized by United States

10

12

 22 v. Williams, 282 F.3d 679, 681 (9th Cir. 2002), claiming that the defendants' 23 conviction cured Agent Guernsey's false and misleading grand jury testimony used 24 to procure the First Superseding Indictment. See Supp. Opp. at p. 78:4-13, 24-27.
 25 These arguments fail, both because Basurto controls and because the cases cited do 26 not support the prosecution's latest position. The holding in Sitton was expressly 27 limited to perjured testimony "not material to the defendant's indictment" and 28 affecting "only the witness' credibility." Sitton, 968 F.2d at 953-54 (emphasis added). Moreover, the prosecution's new argument ignores the ultimate (and binding) holding in Basurto: convictions secured after the prosecution knowingly allows the defendants to stand trial on indictments obtained, in part, by "material" perjured testimony, cannot stand. 497 F.2d at 787 ("Because the prosecuting attorney did not take appropriate action to cure the indictment upon discovery of the perjured grand jury testimony, we reverse appellants' convictions.") (emphasis added).

1 LaMarche material, to its numerous violations of Jencks and Brady, and on and on 2 – were both justified and harmless.

3 On the contrary, defendants' briefs establish that the prosecution committed 4 flagrant misconduct at every stage of this case. That misconduct, when considered 5 "collectively" under the applicable legal standards, requires dismissal. Hein, 601 6 F.3d at 905 n.4 ("[W]e cannot review each instance of non-disclosure or 7 prosecutorial misconduct in isolation, but rather must view them collectively in 8 light of the entire record.").

9           B. Reviewed Collectively, The Prosecution's Course Of Misconduct
 10           Caused Substantial Prejudice And Requires Dismissal

11 The Ninth Circuit has expressly held that the prejudice threshold in a motion 12 to dismiss for prosecutorial misconduct "is a less stringent standard than the Brady 13 materiality standard" and "the proper prejudice inquiry is whether the government 14 conduct 'had at least some impact on the verdict and thus redounded to [the 15 defendant's] prejudice.'" United States v. Ross, 372 F.3d 1097, 1110 (9th Cir.
 16 2004) (citation omitted) (emphasis added). Despite this clear law on point, the 17 Supplemental Opposition accuses the defense of "cleverly attempt[ing] to lower 18 their burden" of prejudice, by "misleadingly" quoting from United States v.
 19 Hector, No. 04-CR-860, 2008 WL 2025069 (C.D. Cal. May 8, 2008). Supp. Opp.
 20 at p. 68, n. 74. But it is the prosecution, not the defense, that misconstrues Hector.

21           The prosecution argues first that the holding in Hector regarding the "low" 22 prejudice standard applies only to cases involving "egregious" prosecutorial 23 misconduct, as opposed to "flagrant" misconduct. The prosecution then accuses 24 the defense of misquoting the holding in Hector to hide this. The prosecution is 25 wrong.

26           Defendants' fully quoted the very language the prosecution accuses them of 27 "omit[ting]." See Supp. Brief at p. 59. More importantly, the defendants' briefs 28 show that, whatever word is used, the prosecution violated the misconduct rules.

1     Hector does not distinguish between “egregious” and “flagrant” misconduct, but 2 instead uses the two terms interchangeably when construing the Ross prejudice 3 standard:

4         Once egregious government conduct has been established, the 5 prejudice standard is low; Defendant must show only that the 6 Government’s flagrant conduct had “at least some impact on the 7 verdict.” Ross, 372 F.3d at 1110 (internal quotation marks omitted).
 8 This prejudice standard is “a less stringent standard than the Brady 9 materiality standard,” id., which requires a showing that the 10 “suppressed evidence would have created a ‘reasonable probability’ of 11 a different result,” United States v. Jernigan, 492 F.3d 1050, 1053-54 12 (9th Cir. 2007) (en banc) (internal quotation marks omitted). A 13 ‘reasonable probability’ of a different result does not mean that a 14 defendant would more likely than not have received a different 15 verdict; “[i]nstead, [a defendant] must show only that the 16 government’s evidentiary suppression undermines confidence in the 17 outcome of the trial.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). Because 18 the standard for egregious government conduct is lower than that 19 required to show prejudice under Brady, Mr. Hector does not even 20 need to demonstrate that the misconduct undermines confidence in the 21 trial. Any impact on the trial at all will suffice.

22     Hector, 2008 WL 2025069 at * 18 (emphasis added).<sup>35</sup> Clearly, this standard has 23 been satisfied by the defendants.

---

24
 25         <sup>35</sup> The Ninth Circuit has likewise used the term “egregious” when referring to 26 “reckless” prosecutorial misconduct. See United States v. Chapman, 524 F.3d 27 1073, 1085, 1090 (9th Cir. 2008) (referring to prosecutors’ “reckless disregard” for 28 their discovery obligations as “egregiously fail[ing] to meet its constitutional obligations”).

1        To excuse this course of misconduct, the prosecution limits its prejudice 2 analysis to its handling of Agent Guernsey's missing grand jury transcript.
 3 Disregarding the applicable Hein v. Sullivan standard, the prosecution does not 4 analyze whether its misconduct throughout this case, in the aggregate, had "some 5 impact" on the verdict. The prosecution's approach is wrong. As stated in United 6 States v. Frederick, 78 F.3d 1370 (9th Cir. 1996), "a balkanized, issue-by-issue 7 harmless error review is far less effective than analyzing the overall effect of all 8 the errors in the context of the evidence introduced at trial against the defendant."
 9 Id. at 1381 (internal quotations and citation omitted).

10      The prejudice caused by the prosecution's misconduct, as set forth in earlier 11 pleadings and detailed above, whether it is viewed individually or in the aggregate, 12 is demonstrable and undoubtedly had "at least some impact on the verdict." Ross, 13 372 F.3d at 1110. As a result, the First Superseding Indictment must be dismissed.

14      C. The Handling Of Agent Guernsey's Transcript, Standing Alone, 15      Is Flagrant Misconduct

16      The prosecution improperly attempts to confine the Court's analysis of 17 whether it engaged in "flagrant" misconduct only to the violation of the Court's 18 order requiring full disclosure of Agent Guernsey's grand jury transcripts. But 19 even the prosecution's handling of the Guernsey grand jury transcripts shows a 20 reckless disregard for both constitutional obligations and court orders. Chapman, 21 524 F.3d at 1085 ("'[F]lagrant misbehavior'" includes "reckless disregard for the 22 prosecution's constitutional obligations.").

23      The prosecution argues that it "unintentionally did not comply with a court 24 order" requiring the production of all of Agent Guernsey's grand jury testimony, 25 because the October 14, 2010 "transcript was inadvertently placed with materials 26 from another case." Supp. Opp. at pp. 60, 62. It stresses that, upon discovering the 27 transcript, it "immediately disclosed it to the defendants and notified the Court."
 28 Supp. Opp. at p. 62, n. 69. The prosecution then submits this "weighs against a

1 finding of flagrant misbehavior.”<sup>36</sup> Id. Finally, it contends that its (false)
 2 assertions to the Court of full discovery compliance on April 7, 2011 “[u]ndercuts 3 the [d]efendants’ [c]laim of [r]eckless [d]isregard.” Supp. Opp. at pp. 64-65. In 4 addition, according to the prosecution, Mr. Miller’s earlier “comments” made 5 during the “April 7 [o]ral [d]iscovery [r]eport” actually “demonstrates that the 6 government took its discovery obligations seriously.” Supp. Opp at pp. 64-65. In 7 reality, the prosecution’s actions speak louder than its words, and they establish 8 just the opposite.

9       When the Court ordered that all of Agent Guernsey’s grand jury testimony 10 be produced to it in camera on January 27, 2011, the prosecution provided the 11 Court with only two of the four days of her testimony. In addition, before the 12 March 28-29, 2011 hearing on Dr. Lindsey’s Miranda Motion, the prosecution 13 purposefully provided the defendants with a carefully and heavily redacted version 14 of Agents Guernsey’s grand jury testimony, consisting of snippets from only one 15 of her grand jury appearances. The prosecution thereby purposefully concealed 16 most of her false and misleading testimony.

17       This extremely limited production of Jencks material for the Miranda 18 Motion nevertheless revealed several false representations by Agent Guernsey to

---

20       <sup>36</sup> The prosecution’s reliance on United States v. Kearns, 5 F.3d 1251 (9th Cir.
 21 1993), is misplaced; in fact, Kearns supports the defense. Kearns found no 22 flagrant misconduct by federal prosecutors in failing to locate and disclose an 23 informant’s written cooperation agreement maintained by a police department (as 24 opposed to the prosecution), because “a written copy of the agreement was turned 25 over to [the defense] before the end of trial and within hours of the prosecution’s 26 receipt of it.” Id. at 1254. In contrast, the prosecutors here have always been 27 aware of Agent Guernsey’s October 14, 2010 grand jury testimony. They 28 presented the testimony to the grand jury at the time, stored that transcript in Mr.
 Miller’s own office, did not locate and disclose it despite a Court order requiring them to do so, and only produced it after trial following a further, pointed inquiry by defense counsel.

1 the grand jury. In response, on March 25, 2011, the defense renewed its request
 2 for Agent Guernsey's entire grand jury transcript. March 25, 2011, RT at 111:15 – 3 112:6. The Court again ordered the prosecution to produce the entire transcript in 4 camera, this time by the next court day. March 25, 2011, RT at 112:14-16.

5 In complying with that order, Mr. Miller states that he “realized” he had not 6 included the September 15, 2010 transcript in his prior in camera production.
 7 Miller Decl. at ¶ 7. Mr. Miller complied with the Court’s March 25th order on 8 March 28th, filing three sessions of the Guernsey grand jury transcript, seemingly 9 without acknowledging he had previously filed just two sessions. He did not 10 produce the October 14, 2010 grand jury transcript of Agent Guernsey’s testimony.

11 On April, 7, 2011, the prosecution assured this Court that it had conducted a 12 “top-to-bottom review of the discovery” and claimed that it had “exceed[ed]” its 13 discovery obligations. April 7, 2011, RT at 880:23 – 883:5. At that time, 14 however, the prosecution was still withholding from the defense: (1) Agent 15 Guernsey’s patently false grand jury testimony; (2) an FBI 302 statement by 16 Fernando M. Basurto (a witness who testified the same day the prosecution assured 17 the Court of their discovery compliance); (3) a potentially exculpatory FBI 302 18 statement by former LMC employee Patrick Rowan; and (4) evidence linking the 19 military school payments for Nestor Moreno to ABB as opposed to LMC.

20 In response to the April 15, 2011 Court order requiring the prosecution to 21 disclose to the defense all of Agent Guernsey’s grand jury testimony, the 22 prosecution produced only three of her four days of testimony. The October 14, 23 2010 session of Agent Guernsey’s testimony apparently remained in Mr. Miller’s 24 office. It was not produced until after trial and only in response to a further inquiry 25 by defense counsel. This course of conduct alone establishes the prosecution’s 26 reckless approach to its obligations.

27 The prosecution’s attempt to distinguish this case from United States v.
 28 Chapman, 524 F.3d 1073 (9th Cir. 2008), and United States v. Fitzgerald, 615 F.

1 Supp. 2d 1156 (S.D. Cal. 2009), falls flat. In fact, their arguments highlight the 2 striking similarities between the conduct here and the conduct at issue in those 3 cases.

4 Similar to those cases, the facts here establish that the prosecution (1) did 5 not keep an accurate production log (if it even kept one at all);<sup>37</sup> (2) repeatedly 6 assured the Court on December 14, 2010, March 30, 2010, and April 7, 2011, that 7 it had fully complied with its discovery obligations and even exceeded them, 8 despite its failure to do so; (3) still refuses to concede the relevance and 9 exculpatory nature of Agent Guernsey's grand jury testimony; (4) withheld 10 discoverable information, despite several indications from the defense and the 11 Court that there were discovery problems;<sup>38</sup> and (5) still refuses to accept

12

14

<sup>37</sup> The prosecution clearly did not keep accurate records enabling them to verify they had timely disclosed all of Agent Guernsey's grand jury testimony, all of Mr. Basurto's FBI 302 statements, and all of the LMC employee FBI 302 statements.

15

<sup>38</sup> The prosecution attempts to excuse its misconduct, claiming the Court never provided it with "warnings" about discovery production concerns. Supp. Opp. at pp. 63-64. Federal prosecutors do not need warnings from the Court to comply with Brady, Jencks and Rule 16. In any event, the record reflects that the Court repeatedly warned the prosecution about the need for it to comply with its discovery obligations. The prosecution received more than a "fair warning" on numerous occasions. See, e.g., December 14, 2010, RT at 41:22 – 42:18 (The Court cautioned Mr. Miller that it was giving him "fair warning" of the need to timely produce all discoverable information); March 30, 2011, RT at 10:1-25 (The Court cautioned Mr. Miller that it was counting on him to be aware of discovery and it was his duty to produce Jencks statement and other discovery); April 6, 2011, RT at 722:7 – 723:10 (The Court ordered the prosecution to "make an utterly new top to bottom, absolutely thorough, no exceptions whatsoever, review of everything to which the defendants may have a right in discovery or by virtue of agreements that have been reached or orders that I've issued" and assure the Court that "everything that has ever been asked to which there was an agreement to produce or a duty to produce has been turned over.")

 IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS INDICTMENT

1 responsibility for the vast majority of its misconduct throughout the course of this 2 case.

3 In short, the prosecution's misconduct with respect to the Guernsey grand 4 jury transcript issue, was, at the very least, reckless. When this misconduct is 5 considered in conjunction with the numerous other instances of misconduct set 6 forth in defendants' papers, it adds to a pattern of prosecutorial misconduct, a 7 sustained course of flagrant misbehavior throughout the entire case.

8 IX. CONCLUSION

9 Regardless of what terms are used to describe the prosecution's actions – 10 “mistake,” “misconduct,” “error” – and regardless of whether the prosecution acted 11 willfully or not, one thing is clear: the prosecution, at the very least, recklessly and 12 continuously disregarded its obligations to the Court, the defendants and the 13 Constitution. The cumulative effect of this misconduct substantially prejudiced the 14 defendants' ability to secure a fair trial.

15 If anything, the prosecution's Supplemental Opposition serves as a potent 16 reminder that the prosecution neither appreciates nor acknowledges the magnitude 17 of the numerous instances of misconduct in this case, nor does it accept 18 responsibility for them. United States v. Kojayan, 8 F.3d 1315, 1318 (9th Cir.
19 1993) (“In determining the proper remedy, [a court] must consider the 20 government's willfulness in committing the misconduct and its willingness to own 21 up to it.”).

1 Cross-examination, delayed and inadequate disclosures, and “robust” 2 cautionary instructions are not remedies for this misconduct. See Supp. Opp. at pp.
3 37, 58-69, 77. Rather, the pattern of prosecutorial misconduct evident at every 4 phase of this case – from the searches, to the investigation, to the grand jury, to 5 Brady and Jencks violations, to misrepresentations about the prosecution’s 6 compliance with Tamura and about discovery compliance, to misuse of evidence 7 and improper argument – establishes that defendants were deprived of their right to 8 fair grand jury proceedings and a fair trial. This pattern of misconduct requires 9 dismissal with prejudice.<sup>39</sup> appropriate remedy.
