Location History

Location History helps you get useful information, such as commute predictions, improved search results and more useful ads on and off Google. It does this by creating a private map of where you go with your signed-in devices.

To create this map, Google regularly obtains location data from devices for which you've turned on Location History. This data is collected even when you aren't using a specific Google product.

Generalizations ≠ PC

Furthermore, based on my training, experience and consulting with other investigators, I know the most common types of cell phones used by the vast majority of the people in the United States are smart phones, which are capable of mobile voice calling and data communications, as well as internet connectivity and software application management. Based on my training and experience I know the two most commonly used smart phone operating systems are iOS, which run on Apple iPhones, and Android, which run on the mobile devices of various manufacturers.

I know that when an Android device user first turns on a new Android device they are prompted to add a Google account. The Android account creation process generates an account and email account using the familiar gmail.com format. Based on my training and experience, I know it is impossible for an Android device user to install applications from the Google Play Store without a Google account. Therefore, it is nearly certain that a person using an Android device has an associated Google account.

Overbreadth

“Anonymized” Data?

- Step 1 & 2 data is “anonymized” – but it really isn’t.
- Identifiers are static, tied to individual accounts, & can be cross-referenced over multiple searches.
- Can subpoena subscriber info for (some) “anonymized” identifiers.
- Trivial to identify people from Step 2 data.

“Anonymized” Data?

<sup>39</sup> The fact that data points obtained during Steps 1 and 2 are anonymized when Google reports them does not completely quell this Court’s concerns about the invasiveness of this warrant. Even “anonymized” location data—from innocent people—can reveal astonishing glimpses into individuals’ private lives when the Government collects data across even a one or two hour period. As noted above, during the March hearing, McInvaille identified three anonymous accounts captured within the geofence—“Mr. Blue,” “Mr. Green,” and “Ms. Yellow.” (ECF No. 201, at 63–71.)

Challenging Keyword Warrants

1. Fourth Amendment Interest

- Reasonable expectation of privacy
- Property interest

2. Unconstitutional General Warrant

- Overbreadth
- Lack of particularity

3. No Good Faith

NACDL
FOURTH
CENTER

Fourth Amendment Interest

- Expectation of privacy:
  - Search history is some of the most private data that exists.
  - See Seymour briefing & EFF amicus
- Property interest:
  - Search History is “account contents”
  - Like photos, emails = private “papers”

Overbreadth

- No probable cause for even one person's search history
- No probable cause to search billions
- Over-seizure of searches that contain "other words"

got probable?®

Particularity

- Place to be searched = “1600 Amphitheater Parkway”?
- Fails to identify individual accounts
- Digital equivalent of a billion-story apartment building

Resources

- Briefs, Transcripts, Google Materials:
