Barry Scheck installed as president-elect of nation's top criminal defense organization

Washington D.C. — Barry C. Scheck was sworn in as president-elect of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers at the organization's annual meeting last week in Denver. Last year, Scheck served as first vice president.

A life member of the NACDL, Scheck is a professor and director of clinical legal education at Cardozo School of Law and is nationally known for his litigation work that has set standards for the forensic use of DNA testing. A graduate of Yale University and University of California at Berkeley's Boalt School of Law, Scheck is the co-founder of the Cardozo School of Law Innocence Project, which has been involved in the exonerations of 131 prisoners through post-conviction DNA testing.

Scheck is a commissioner on New York's Forensic Science Review Board and serves on the board of directors of the National Institute of Justice's Commission on the Future of DNA Evidence. He is co-chair of the NACDL's DNA Task Force and in 1996, received the NACDL's prestigious Robert C. Heeney Award for his contributions to the association.
