Level 1: Referral(s) and Reporting of Outcomes to the Court, as Required – The Probation Officer makes basic referrals and monitors the youth's compliance with services but does not provide case management or community supervision (probation or parole).

Level 2: Post-Disposition Case Management – The Probation Officer makes contact (face-to-face, telephonic, or electronic) with the youth and, if applicable and appropriate, parent/legal guardian at least once a month; however, no specific rules are put in place and no supervision plan is developed. This includes crisis intervention when the parent needs support. The Probation Officer may make referrals as needed, but will rely on community-based services to address the needs of the youth. This is not formal probation or parole supervision.

Level 3: Court-Ordered Probation Supervision – The Probation Officer provides at least monthly contact with the youth and, if applicable and appropriate, parent/legal guardian. The Probation Officer monitors compliance with specified rules and conditions. The Probation Officer also completes a full YASI and social history and develops a supervision plan. The frequency of contacts is based on the YASI risk level and supervision level.

Level 4: Court-Ordered Out-Of-Home Placement with Case Management or Probation – The Probation Officer provides case management or probation supervision for youth placed outside of the home for any reason. This includes residential placement (e.g., post disposition detention, post dispositional detention program, locally or state-funded group home, etc.). Case managers should seek funding for residential placements from existing resources (e.g., VJCCCA, CSA, etc.). The court may also order case management services to be provided by another agency.

Level 5: Commitment to DJJ – The Probation Officer collaborates with direct care staff and provides parole supervision for youth who are placed in the custody of DJJ for a determinate or indeterminate period of time.
